AFFAIRS IN ENGLAND.

SOCIAL AND POLITICAL GOSSIP.

The Season—Retrospective Scenes—Chronique Scandaleuse—The Strike at Preston—American Topics—The British Revenue—Dramatic and Musical.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, April 3.

We are just passing through one of those sessions which have given London a bad name, and caused many a foreigner to believe that the sun is an unknown phenomenon in these regions. For a month past the sky has seemed to be within a few feet of the roof-tops, leaden in color, and occasionally pouring down upon us torrents of rain. A miserable east wind has swept up and down the streets, afflicting the people with all manner of ailments, and casting a weight of depression on the mind which no effort is able to shake off. Everybody one meets seems plunged in a fit of the deepest dejection. Toward dinner-time countenances may brighten a little, and for a few hours bright lights and good fare serve to dispel the horrors which weeks of melancholy weather accumulate upon the spirit. But on the following morning there is the same unnatural darkness in the streets, the rain descends steadily, the sky is black, the bitter east wind cuts like a whip of steel. Can you wonder that we should be deemed a morose and sad-hearted people? I scarcely remember having obtained a fair look in the face at the sun since last October. He may have peeped forth through watery clouds for a few minutes, but it was always a very stagey-looking sun, and disappears quite as quickly as if he were moved by a scene-shifter. The other day the volunteers intended to hold a grand review, as their wont is on Easter Monday. They went down to Dover, and found themselves just in time to face one of the heaviest gales which have visited that part of the coast this Winter. They got wet to the skin—probably many of them will have reason to remember the day as long as they live. After all they have only been "chaffed" for their pains. If an enemy wanted to invade England at Dover he could not, it is said, choose a better time than when the volunteers were there. The railway is so occupied that it would not be able to bring down regular troops, and want of proper training and organization would render the volunteers entirely useless. No officer could manage them on the sudden. This is what military men say, and the volunteers are not able to answer the assertion. Consequently they are rapidly declining in public favor, and if we had five years more of peace the probability is that the volunteer force of 120,000 men would collapse. It needs the apprehension of war to keep martial ardor alive.

To-day, for the first time in several weeks, the east wind has abated, and ladies begin to summon up courage to go out into the streets. Moreover, the town is just assuming its gayest dress. Rich and elegant carriages crowd the streets, and the "dry goods" dealers partially recover their spirits. On Tuesday night the opera seasons opened, of course, with the opera which everybody is sick and tired of—"Norma." The object of fixing upon that must be to add to the general gloom and depression still hanging like a blight over the town. Happily, however, the operatic staff are all quarreling with each other for our amusement. Actors and singers are known to be jealous of each other sometimes, and the amalgamation of two companies has produced a violent storm. Mlle. This is to sing a part rightfully belonging to Mlle. That, and of course the latter flings her engagement in the manager's face. The poor manager is obliged to start off to Paris just as he was about to sit down to dinner in order that he may calm the rage of the injured lady. Everybody is jealous of everybody. "She shan't sing that—he has no business to play in that position," are the cries which rend Covent Garden. Fancy what a life the manager must be leading. Mr. COSTA will not conduct. Mr. SAINTON will not play the violin. Mr. LAZARUS declines to perform on the cornet. Mlle. NILSSON refuses to sing—most grievous loss of all. The whole affair is in confusion. Why cannot these artistes love each other as men of letters do, for example?

SCANDALOUS GOSSIP.

The hurley-burley of musicians at least serves to divert attention from the east-wind, and beside there have been several attempts in society to give people something to talk about. To begin with—rather a strong beginning—a Marquis ran away with another man's wife. The "other man" happened to hold an official position under Government, and the lady was very well known in general circles. She went to the Queen's levée, and instead of returning home, went off with the Marquis of WATERFORD. The husband—Captain V——, —set off in pursuit and caught the fugitives, but the lady preferred to remain with her newly-found "protector." "Seeing that the affair has been going on so long, I wonder V—— took so much trouble," was the remark made to me by a friend of the bereaved husband on the night when his wife fled. Perhaps the Marquis will suffer most by this little adventure in the end. He cannot show his face here again for some years, and he is obliged to give up his establishment in Ireland. But the Marquises of this family have never been squeamish in such matters. The present goose is 25 years old, and has about as much sense as he was born with.

While the scandal-mongers were rolling this sweet morsel under their tongues, another sensation arrived to cheer them. This time a well-known Warwickshire family were implicated. The wife was about to make her lord the present of a child, when she suddenly announced that the father was not the husband. He threatened a suit for divorce, but the question was upon which of the lady's lovers should he fix as co-respondent? There is said to have been a wide choice. The lady was indifferent as regards the decision. But now, it appears, the insinuations against the lady's character were founded only upon her own incoherent exclamations during her illness. The husband has tried to hush-up the whole story, but unfortunately it was already in the hands of newspaper men. They, in dull times like these, could not afford to part with it hastily, and Warwickshire is consequently much shocked—at the disclosure, be it understood. The crime consists in being found out. There are great outcries about the "licentiousness" of the press, but as to the licentiousness of good society, such a thing is never mentioned.

In fact, writers are really growing very personal. Here is the Standard publishing all kinds of revelations concerning Mr. GLADSTONE's life and habits. It has found out that after the victorious division of the second reading of the Irish Church bill he went to offer up thanks, on a week day, in a church where Ritualism is carried out to an extreme almost unknown elsewhere. The church is a good distance from Mr. GLADSTONE's house—therefore, he could not have gone there as a matter of convenience. Mr. GLADSTONE is a Ritualist, and he worshiped in a church where the service is in conformity with his ideas. Is there anything so very dreadful in that, after all? Then Mr. ANTHONY TROLLOPE is accused of caricaturing public men in his new novel, Phineas Finn, but the novelist writes to vindicate himself. He declares that he did not mean to depict Mr. BRIGHT under the name of Turnbull, but his contradiction is very curiously worded, and suggests the probability that Mr. TROLLOPE was anxious chiefly to evade the charge. Certain it is that the English readers of Phineas Finn will find it difficult to avoid seeing a resemblance between Mr. Daubeny and Mr. DISRAELI, Mr. Grresham and Mr. GLADSTONE, Mr. Mildmay and Lord RUSSELL, Lord de Terrier and Lord DERBY. If the sketch of Mr. Turnbull was not meant for Mr. BRIGHT, people will go on believing that it was. This license was recently extended to the stage, where, in a play by Mr. EDMUND YATES, Mr. SWINBURNE, the poet, was brought forward in a manner as gross and offensive as are some of Mr. SWINBURNE's own writings. Moreover, there have appeared within the last few weeks several journals which openly violate common decency in dealing with private character. The most malignant attacks are made under flimsy disguises, and everybody wonders why some of the aggrieved persons do not seek for the protection of the law. A shameful article was recently published in one of these publications—the Queen's Messenger—under the title of "The Duke of Farebrother." The most disgraceful charges were brought against the Royal Duke in question. He was accused even of having shown cowardice at the battle of Inkermann. Since then the attack has been renewed, and of course people buy the Queen's Messenger to see who is the next victim. Moral England is improving backward. The Press is going back to the standard of the Age and John Bull, and even the wives of our statesmen are not secure from malicious attacks. When Mrs. DISRAELI was created a peeress the Daily News set to work throwing mud at her in the hope of wounding her husband. Yet, of course, the English Press is so very much superior to anything the rest of the world has to boast of.

THE STRIKE AT PRESTON.

Among the more serious matters which occupy attention is that unhappy strike at Preston which threatens to throw 15,000 men out of employment. I asked, in a recent letter, how it happens that none of the recognized friends of the working classes had intervened to settle the dispute between the workmen and the masters? I am glad to state now that Mr. MUNDELLA, M. P., has come forward to offer his friendly offices. Mr. MUNDELLA has done a great deal toward making "Courts of Conciliation" popular, and he has been an able advocate of arbitration in all trade disputes. The facts he has now to deal with are very simple—the manufacturers say that they had better close their mills altogether than pay the present rate of wages, and that a reduction of ten per cent. is absolutely indispensable. The workmen, on the other hand, while admitting that the state of trade is very bad, contend that a reduction of five per cent. would be quite sufficient to protect the masters from loss. Mr. MUNDELLA has not yet made any practical proposition—he has merely sent down to Preston for information. But should he succeed in settling the quarrel, another great blow to strikes will have been dealt. The principle of the "Courts of Conciliation" which he is anxious to establish in Preston is this: A council is chosen consisting of employers and employed. He has found that a controversy can readily be settled by "friendly discussion" at these Boards, but there is provision made for a casting vote, should discussion fail. In the course of three years and a half, however, it was not once found necessary where the Courts were tried to take a vote. "Experience teaches me," wrote Mr. MUNDELLA, some little time ago, "that it is always better, if possible, to agree without voting. And it is surprising how this attempt at friendly bargaining removes those difficulties from which strikes commonly ensue." The workmen generally think highly of Mr. MUNDELLA, and they returned him to Parliament from Sheffield, at the last election, in place of Mr. ROEBUCK. In one council, held at Nottingham, the workmen, who had demanded an increase of wages, were brought face to face with some foreign manufacturers of the article they themselves made, and it was proved that these manufacturers could undersell them, and that if they insisted on a rise in wages they would simply throw all the trade into a foreign market. It is difficult to resist a course of argument so conclusive as this. With the gradual adoption of Courts of Conciliation strikes must become impossible.

AMERICAN TOPICS.

There is an article in the Economist of to-day which may not command the assent of your readers, or perhaps contain anything very new to them, but which it is worth while calling attention to for a moment. It is upon the "material condition of the United States," and its object is to show that America has furnished a very striking proof of the evils of that commercial policy which we have discarded. The last report of Mr. WELLS supplies the statistics of the article, and as I have seen that report partly printed and fully discussed in the NEW-YORK TIMES, I shall not quote any of the figures cited by the writer in the Economist. He mentions the authority of the NEW-YORK TIMES for the statement that three-fifths of the skilled laborers in New-York "are not receiving decent living wages," while there are thousands of operatives unemployed. I may add that the series of articles in the NEW-YORK TIMES upon the condition of the laboring classes in America, the cost of living and kindred topics, has attracted great attention in political circles here, and have not been without their impression on the President of the Poor Law Board, who once talked of sending out our pauper class to the United States.

To return: The writer in the Economist maintains that neither the paper currency nor the taxation has caused the advance of prices so generally complained of in the United States. Taxation is less now with you than with us, and the writer doubts whether it "is really much more than could be borne with comparative ease under a proper system." It is the high tariff which the Economist holds to be at the bottom of the mischief. Although I do not like making quotations, I am obliged to present the following argument of your contemporary unabridged:

"The effect of a high tariff when foreign articles that would come in are kept out by it must be equivalent to the destruction of so much capital, and at the most vital points in the economy of the nation. A tariff like the American one raises the price of the articles affected, that is, the price of almost everything except the raw produce of the country itself, and the capital which would otherwise have sufficed for the business of the country is at once insufficient. Whatever may be the precise effect on prices generally, the system must plainly diminish both the profit of the capitalist and the wages of the laborer. At the same time everything is made dearer to the consumer as well as the producer, so that the effective demand for the national productions is diminished."

The writer goes on to illustrate these principles by the instances brought forward in Mr. WELLS' report—lumber and pig-iron. "However bad the present state of affairs may be," says the Economist in conclusion, "the protected manufacturer will always apprehend as worse for him the renewal of the competition which he has artificially warded off, and which he is less than ever able to meet." I must leave this abridgement of the article to the judgment of the reader.

THE BRITISH REVENUE.

The returns of the revenue for the first quarter of the year are not satisfactory. There is a falling off, as compared with last year, to the extent of $554,000, although this is partially compensated for by an increase in the excise and Post Office. The net decrease in the revenue is $219,000. There is the excess of Abyssinian expenditure to be provided for, and altogether Mr. LOWE will scarcely be able to bring forward a very popular Budget, unless, indeed, he proceeds upon the principle which first made Mr. GLADSTONE popular—taking off duties—i. e., lessening indirect taxation and increasing direct taxation. Cast the burden of government upon one class, the class least likely to complain. Whether Mr. LOWE makes a further step in this direction or not, you will know long before the present letter reaches you.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

Another new drama, called "Dreams," by Mr. T. W. ROBERTSON, was produced at the Gaiety Theatre on Saturday last. It is the same play as "Lady Clara de Vere," but "adapted" for the London stage. Mr. ROBERTSON cannot afford to make many experiments of the same kind. It is not only a bad play, but it is one of the worst I have seen for a long time. I saw it on its first representation, and at one time thought it was doomed. The hisses were loud and persistent. When Mr. ROBERTSON came on the stage at the fall of the curtain, he, too, was loudly hissed as well as cheered, and he stood there for some few moments, as if in defiance of the hisses. The play was not well acted, but still it met with no more than its deserts. In success spoiling Mr. ROBERTSON? It needs the sharp touch of adversity to keep a man up to his proper mark. We must remember, too, that the managers are all pressing him for plays, and under these circumstances a man is tempted to turn out work faster than its merit would warrant. Mr. ROBERTSON cannot be receiving less than $320 or $400 a week just now from all sources, London and provincial.

On Thursday night the Opera House was crowded, and the audience thawed a little. It had been exceedingly frigid the first night. The performance was "Rigoletto," and Signor MONGINI sang the music allotted to the Duke superbly. Mr. SANTLEY was Rigoletto, and Mlle. VANZINI, a débutante of last season, Gilda, his daughter. Nothing could have been more perfect than the quartet in the third act. I hear that Mlle. PATTI makes her first appearance about the 4th of May. A. L.

AFFAIRS IN CUBA.

News from the Insurgents—Bubbles—Arrests of Political Offenders—Miscellaneous Intelligence.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, April 10, 1869.

The Sanguaneo, the name of a mountainous district situated on the south side of the island, about 20 miles south from Cienfuegos, the chain of mountains extending from the Hanabanilla River toward Trinidad and the coast. According to all reports, both Cuban and Spanish, a Cuban army of ten to fifteen thousand men, and consisting of the very flower of the Cubans from the Cinco Villas, occupied this region. The Spanish troops, over four thousand strong, left Cienfuegos, Villa Clara and Trinidad simultaneously on the 28th, and according to the official account published arrived on the 31st at Sguaneo, within easy communicating distance. The troops were commanded by Generals BUCETA LEZONA PELAEZ and ESCALANTE, the big guns of the army of operations, and on arriving at the Sguaneo the official report concludes by stating that they did not meet with a single insurgent, although they had marched from different directions, had explored every where, and had found the defenses of the insurgents abandoned. This official history is one of the strangest and most peculiar documents I have ever read, and I have been wondering how and in what manner an army of twelve thousand men, completely surrounded, managed to make themselves invisible and escape without even a single man having been seen by the attacking forces. At any rate, the troops returned from whence they came, and the insurgents are somewhere else. In view of the peculiar results attending these hunts, or battues, as the Spaniards factitiously term them, the journals are advocating that a padron or census be taken of every person residing in the island, specifying their particular residence, and making them liable to be tried as insurgents if they should be found away from home at any time without having first given notice to the Police, and giving a clear account where they have been. The Cubans enjoy an immense advantage over the Spaniards in this respect, as they can come and go at will, disperse when there is any indication of defeat, and again assemble when there are any probabilities of success. Excepting a very few Cubans brought up in Spain, or some members of the aristocracy and nobility, the insurgents can count on the rest of their countrymen, and on their aid and sympathy. The fighting Cubans from Puerto Principe, Bayamo and Holguin are by themselves sufficient to keep the Spaniards busily employed for many months to come, and in their region of the country it will be impossible to organize successfully the proposed rural Police, as in the Cinco Villas, where the planters are now organizing a regular Police force of 200 infantry and 200 cavalry.

BUBBLES.

The statement that the revolution would be over in thirty to sixty days—that the Spanish Government has sent money to Cuba—that, according to A. OAKEY HALL and HENRY WARD BEECHER, the insurgents now hold 147 towns and cities in the island—this is almost true, but 146½ of these towns have been recently imported from the moon, the entire island not containing 147, and the insurgents holding only half of Gibarra, that is, a few houses on the other side of the town. The Spaniards hold all the towns, and south of Cienfuegos the insurgents hold about all the country. The matter has been pretty fairly divided.

ARRESTS OF POLITICAL OFFENDERS.

Arrests of suspected persons continue to be made, and especially of such Cubans returning from the United States who have been sufficiently imprudent to attract the attention of the Spanish spies. Five passengers, who arrived by the Eagle, were arrested and are now confined in the Morro. New-York is full of spies, and, as a friend informs me who has a chance to know, their reports about the movements of prominent Cubans in the United States are most minute and voluminous. I asked whether all such spies were Spaniards. "Oh no; no nation is unrepresented, and Cuba furnishes a larger number than old Spain; but we don't place so much faith in their reports, because they are from such Cubans as we know to be blackguards, and who would sell their father for money." "But how do they manage to understand the English language?" I asked again. "We have men of all nations in our employ, and your American detectives are most excellent to govern our spies, and order them where to go and how to act."

Among the prisoners brought by the Rapido are the following from Sti Spiritus: LUIS ALCANTARA, Notary of the Army; JUAN MARQUEZ, Justice of the Peace; Dr. JUDALECIO TALLA, Alderman; LEANDRO ECHEMENDIA, Alderman; D. ECHEMENDIA, physician; A. DE MENERES, Lieutenant of Volunteers and Public Surveyor; J. M. CANCIO, RAMON CASTANEDA, ANTONIO ECHEMENDIA, GOMEZ, the manufacturer of the cartridges which were sent to Gibarra, and to which the priest CASTILLO, who was sent to Fernando Po, furnished the lead, and many others of note and distinction.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Several street rows, caused by political excitement, took place last night.

The Treasurer of the University, Mr. JULIAN PEREIRA, has run away, taking the salaries of the Professors and some University funds with him. PEREIRA only imitated the Government, which some five months ago robbed the University of $60,000, its reserve fund and savings, calling it a loan.

Mr. CRAWS, the administrator of ALDAMA's estate, has been arrested and confined in the jail at Matanzas, charged with having caused the death of nine negroes on the plantation, and of holding suspicious meetings of foreigners on the estate. Owing to the influence of ALDAMA he was released. QUASIMODO.

The Fling Hissed in a Richmond Theatre.

From the Richmond State Journal, April 13.

An incident occurred last night at the Richmond Theatre, during the performance of the "Forty Thieves," which proves beyond peradventure of a doubt that the people of Richmond are "thoroughly reconstructed and Americanized." One of the actors, during a medley song made up of nursery rhymes, and odds and ends, happened to sing, when it came to his turn,

"The Star-spangled Banner, long may it wave."

Ere he had completed the line, there were hisses from different parts of the house; whereupon BISHOP caught up the refrain from his brother actor and added,

"O'er Africa's burning sands," which was received with the most deafening applause from all parts of the house, long-continued and enthusiastic. It was encored, and the same scene reinacted. A number of army officers present (all honor to them) left the house, to manifest their indignation at this insult offered to their country's flag. The few "hisses" offered would not have amounted to anything; but when the ribald jest, at the expense of the flag, received such a tremendous outburst of exultant delight, there was no mistaking the true sentiment of the vast majority of the house.

UTAH.

The Mormon General Conference—The Co-operative Movement—Newspaper Enterprise.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SALT LAKE CITY, Monday, April 5, 1869.

The Mormon Annual General Conference commences to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock in the Big Tabernacle, on the Temple Block, in this city. The weather now is all that could be desired, although, in consequence of the numerous late storms, the roads are very muddy, and travel is anything but agreeable. The Conference usually lasts three days, and is devoted to preaching, mainly on the prominent ecclesiastical topics of the time, exhortation, filling up accidental vacancies in church organization, calling of missionaries, voting for the regular church authorities, disfellowshipping important public offenders, and the transaction of any public church business of importance.

To these Conferences the Mormon people come from all parts of the Territory, just as the ancient Jews were in the habit of going up to Jerusalem to worship. These Conferences, therefore, are times of numberless reunions of families, relatives, friends and acquaintances ordinarily separated by the exigencies of every-day life. In consequence of the frequency with which important movements are publicly determined on and made known at these Conference times, they are always occasions of great expectation, as many individual considerations and arrangements depend on them. Calculations are always made subject (mentally, at least) to the contingencies of the conferences, and many enterprises are deferred until the time of conference is past, lest the conference movements should operate prejudicially.

It is fully expected generally that the subject of cooperation will constitute one of the most important texts for amplification by the various speakers, as it has been one of the chief topics of public discourse and action for some time past, and is yet but an experiment, although now of general adoption, with prospects of very extensive development in this Territory in the future.

After considerable cold and snow and rain and mud, a fine time appears to have commenced. April thus far has been very pleasant, and agricultural operations have advanced rapidly.

Miss LUCILLE WESTERN and Mr. J. A. HERNE, with Miss ANNIE LOCKHART, still continue at the theatre, drawing good houses, excepting during the very wet weather. At meeting or at work during the day, at theatre at night—such is life with many Mormons, and it is difficult to say which they enjoy most.

Last Christmas literary matters seemed to promise exceeding briskness, but the promise has hardly been realized yet. Ogden, it was strongly reported, was to be blessed with three daily papers. As yet it has none, and the railroad has gone by it to Bear River. The Reporter, of this city, it is stated, will shortly remove to the new town of Corinne, on Bear River. Mr. STENHOUSE, editor and proprietor of the Ogden Times to be, is now on his return to this place from the East, with material for his new paper, which, it is generally understood, will be started immediately after his arrival. The Utah Magazine, at the close of the first year, suspends issue a few weeks, in order to get a good start with the second year with new type, better paper, more matter, enlarged form, lower price, and, let us charitably hope, a more attractive appearance; for hitherto, it beauty has been an advantage, the Magazine has labored under serious disadvantages.

It is reported about town that BRIGHAM YOUNG contemplates a visit to the Southern settlements, and probably to the Colorado River, as soon as the Conference is well over.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Another Hearing at the Massachusetts State-house—Rev. James Freeman Clarke, Hon. George F. Hoar, Late M. C., and the Famous Aaron Alpeoris Bradley on the Question.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

BOSTON, Wednesday, April 14, 1869.

The advocates of woman suffrage had another hearing at the State-house to-day, and brought forward as their spokesmen Rev. JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE, D. D., the well-known reform advocating clergyman who keeps pace with the Wendell Phillips class pretty regularly; Ex-Congressman GEORGE F. HOAR, of Worcester, brother of the new Attorney-General and acknowledged leader of the Bar in Worcester County, and the famous AARON ALPEORIS BRADLEY, the colored reconstructionist, who made music, somewhat of the discordant order to be sure, down in Georgia during the reconstruction times. But perhaps I do not state the exact truth when I say that Mr. BRADLEY was under the wing of the advocates of suffrage to women who manage the hearings, with Messrs. CLARKE and HOAR, but rather fancy that he came unbidden and spoke at his own suggestion entirely.

Mr. CLARKE said in his speech, that he supposed nobody has a natural right to vote. Voting is a contrivance by which we get public opinion organized into government. Now the question is, whether by extending the suffrage to women we shall get better things organized in the government than are now organized through the voting of men alone; whether it would be for the good of the common weal for women to vote. He conceived three systems in regard to suffrage: that in which there is no such thing as suffrage; that in which suffrage is limited, and that in which it is universal. The first system is found in the government of Mohammedan countries. In these countries there is no such thing as public opinion. The whole object of their Governments is to tax the people, not to protect their property or their rights. If we take the Governments of Europe we find the modified forms of public opinion. Their aim is not to get the opinion of the whole public, but of the wisest, the most intellectual, the best, the so-called higher classes. There are a good many strong arguments in support of this system, and there is something reasonable in this, after all. But the actual working of this is inevitably class legislation; and the effect of this limited suffrage is, that, after a while, the excluded class, when it gets strong enough, breaks out into revolution. Limited suffrage, then, means revolution instead of reform. Now, on the other hand, universal suffrage means reform without revolution. Our policy here is to let everything in the public mind express itself; that the opinion of the whole shall go through suffrage to the Government, and organize itself there. To be sure we have to organize with the good and the wise and the intelligent, ignorance and vice. We have to take this risk. But we think it's best—the result is worthy of the risk. We do not get the opinion of the entire whole, for we make some restrictions which we think are judicious, and except minors, idiots, criminals and women. Experiment has shown us that as we make suffrage more and more universal, partial influence is neutralized by other influences. Take the wisest of men and give them sole power, and they become narrow, one-sided, and unjust; but give the right in government to all classes, and on the whole the good and the bad influences balance and neutralize each other. We know very well that there are certain conditions to make universal suffrage successful. For example, education. This we have recognized, and therefore have opened free schools for the education of the masses. In support of public free schools, we say the law of self-preservation compels us to have them; and, on the same principle, we have the free Press and free speech. Now, the question comes, if this is the foundation of the principles of suffrage, on what principle do we exclude women? It is clear to my we exclude minors; but certainly this objection does not apply to them. Nor does the objection brought against the voting of idiots and insane persons. We exclude criminals because they are public enemies, because we think they have no good will toward the Government; surely women have the best of will. So there must be some special reason. Some persons say that women do not wish it. If it were so he did not think it a good argument. Some neighbors of his do not want to vote; but that was no reason why he should not be allowed to vote. No doubt there were many women in the State who would sign remonstrances against the passage of a law giving women the suffrage. He knew where to go to find these women. He would not go to the intellectual and the thinking and the earnest, but to the frivolous women. The argument that Christianity is opposed to woman suffrage he thought lame; the very passage in Paul's epistle to the Corinthians, so often quoted in support of this point, demonstrated clearly to his mind that Christianity supports the advancement of woman. Christianity knows no male or female. Some hold that suffrage will make women masculine. He thought that God and nature would take care that women should always be woman; that by opening the doors to her she would not go into any door that she ought not to enter. He had noticed, in looking into history, that the moment woman has found it her duty to enter upon a new sphere she has lost none of her modesty, sweetness, and simplicity. Doubtless the immediate effects of giving suffrage to woman will be changed and harm. The increase of the majorities will, perhaps, follow everywhere, for doubtless the majority of women will vote with the majority of men for awhile. But this would be but temporary, and, by and by, women would think and act for themselves. Certainly on questions affecting the home, he thought women would vote as they thought, independent of men; they would vote for what they thought was right, and not what was politic. He did not think that women were essentially better than men, but he thought that the moral sentiment was stronger in them than in men. They were different from men, and therefore were needed in our politics. We are in danger now. Corrupt men, thieves are getting into our politics. There is too much legislation for personal ends. We need a purifying element in our politics, and can get it by admitting woman to the ballot."

Congressman HOAR gave an evidently carefully prepared argument, and in the legal style, addressing the Committee as if he was addressing a jury, and laying down the law to them which as true jurors they should heed. His argument was to show that there was no reason in the world why women should not vote in common with men. He regarded three things as essential in the person who would vote: a desire for the public welfare, the capacity to judge of the character of the persons proposed for candidates, and the capacity to judge of the effect of proposed measures. These he contended women have, and, therefore, should be allowed to vote. He believed that the effect of woman's admittance to the ballot would be gratifying. She would be the friend of the working man, would bring about all good reforms, in labor, raise the pay of the working woman to the level of the pay of the working man of the same order, elevate the tone of society, and purify the ballot and not degrade herself. In enlarging on the point that woman was every way as able to throw the ballot as man as regards education, he spoke of Mrs. RIPLEY, of Concord, of whom it has been said that she was able to hold any professorship in Harvard College, and who, he said, had fitted for college some of the most brilliant, able, polished and learned men of the State, and yet she was not allowed to vote for the smallest officers of her town.

Mr. BRADLEY drew his argument from the assertion which he made that the women of this country already had the right to vote given them in the fifteenth article of the amendment to the Constitution.

The Committee will hear no more now on this question, but meditate awhile in secret, and bring out their report as soon as they can. This will be, it is generally anticipated, in favor of suffrage, but whether the Legislature will vote for suffrage is a doubtful, very doubtful question. I understand that nearly seventy-five hundred women have already petitioned for the right; and only one remonstrance has thus far been received. MUNROE.

PETROLEUM BURNED.

Destruction of an Oil Refinery in Pittsburg—A Loss of $200,000—Several Persons Injured.

From the Pittsburg (Penn.) Gazette, April 15.

One of the most disastrous conflagrations that has taken place in the city for several months, occurred at the extensive oil works of FORSYTHE BROS., on the Sharpsburg road, in the Eighteenth Ward yesterday.

About 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, a still containing a quantity of benzine, which was being distilled by steam, a new process, in consequence of too great a pressure, exploded, and the contents which were scattered over two or three acres of ground ignited whenever it came in contact with fire, and almost instantly everything on the west side of the still for a distance of 100 yards was enveloped in flames. Within a short distance of the still was a frame house occupied by Mr. CRANE, which was covered with the burning fluid; and the inmates, Mrs. CRANE and her baby, Mrs. MCDONOUGH, THOS. COOK and PAT RYAN, becoming frightened at the explosion, ran out into the flames and were seriously burned, some of them severely, perhaps fatally.

As soon as the benzine was consumed the flames on that side of the oil works subsided, without any serious damage having been done. The benzine remaining in the exploded tank continued to burn, and from it the flames communicated to the stillhouse above and to the oil stills below, when the conflagration became general. The settling house, in which there were five tanks, containing about 1,500 barrels of finished oil, next took fire, and from that the fire spread to the building in which was the distilled oil tank, which contained between 7,000 and 8,000 barrels of distilled oil. The several buildings referred to were consumed in a very short space of time, and the immense quantity of oil in the tanks becoming ignited, the flames raged with still greater fury, and defied all efforts made to extinguish them.

The entire works cover about 4 acres of ground, and the buildings, with one or two exceptions, were all brick, and built in a substantial manner. The barreling-house, which is situated on the north side of the grounds, and the three crude oil-tanks with a capacity of 25,000 barrels, each adjoining it, had, up to a late hour last night, escaped the flames, and it was thought that they could be saved. The cooper-shop, a frame structure, situated between the distilled oil tank and the road, had escaped the flames up to the time our reporter left the scene of conflagration, but owing to its proximity to the great volume of burning oil, it was probably destroyed.

As soon as possible after the first explosion an alarm was struck from box No. 76, which is located near the Cemetery gate, over a mile from the fire, and the Fire Department in the Third District responded promptly, and worked faithfully all day. Their entire efforts were to save three buildings, which the flames had not reached, surrounding the fire, as it was impossible to save those that were burning when they arrived, or to save the oil which was already on fire.

A crude oil tank belonging to KOEHLER & BROTHERS, whose refinery is adjoining that of FORSYTHE BROTHERS, burned, but it contained but a small quantity of oil, and consequently the loss was but trifling. A building of the Mutual Refining Company, some distance below, was also on fire, but the flames were extinguished before they had made much progress. Two oil boats, belonging to FORSYTHE BROTHERS, also took fire, and floated some distance down the river, when they were stopped and the fire put out, before the boats had received any material damage.

The loss, so far as could be ascertained, would not fall short of $200,000, on which there was about $45,000 insurance. The fire was still burning when our reporter left the ground, and there was but little, if any, probability of saving any portion of the oil in the tanks that were on fire, or of quenching the flames until the oil was entirely consumed.

The ladies and children who were burned were removed to the residence of a neighbor and kindly cared for. Their injuries are not of a serious nature. COOK was only slightly burned about the face and hands. RYAN, it appears, has been unwell for some days, and at the time of the explosion was in bed, having no clothing on but his shirt. On hearing the explosion, he jumped from the bed, and seeing the house enveloped in flames, ran out, without taking time to put on any more clothing, and in that condition ran over a mile before stopping. His legs and feet were slightly burned. He stopped in a house near the casualty, and was kindly cared for by the occupants.

Where Did Twitchell Get His Poison?

From the Philadelphia North American, April 15.

The hydrocyanic acid with which TWITCHELL destroyed his life was not the acid of the drug stores. Dr. WEIR MITCHELL informs us concerning it. The acid prescribed for medical use, as prescribed by the Faculty, is diluted with nine parts of water. Of the acid of SCHEELE's strength, as found in the cell of TWITCHELL, one drop requires ninety-nine parts of water to reduce it to the standard of the acid used in pharmacy. Of the latter a tablespoonful would have answered all the purpose required of it by the suicide. It might have been obtained with comparative ease by any plausible person convincing a druggist that he wanted it for a special purpose. But this Scheele's acid is used to so limited an extent that apothecaries do not keep it. It is a poison that no private person would prepare. The apparatus in which to produce it is extensive, and the fumes evolved in its various stages of manufacture are highly noxious if not deadly. That the poison was not furnished from any retail drug store may be set down as certain. If the bottle found in TWITCHELL's cell was full when he got it, he drank enough of the poison to send him into the other world with scarce less celerity than if he had been blown from a cannon's mouth. Where the Scheele acid was obtained by the person who smuggled it into the cell of TWITCHELL is a question as puzzling as any other connected with the romance.

THE MINNESOTA HORROR.

Funeral of the Five Victims of the Maniac Gray—The Relatives Visit the Murderer in Jail.

From the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer, April 16.

The curtain has fallen upon another act in the fearful Oakdale tragedy. The fact being generally known that the funeral services of the ill-fated mother and her four children would take place at St. Mary's Church yesterday, the church was crowded and a number were collected about the doors. About 10 o'clock the sad procession of the bodies of the victims, the mourning relatives and sympathising neighbors and friends, in carriages, wagons, on horseback and on foot, arrived at the church. The five coffins were removed to the foot of the altar, the mother in the centre and two of the children on each side. The sad, unusual sight drew tears from the eyes of almost all present. The solemn and impressive services for the dead of the Catholic Church were read by Rev. Father CALLIGHT, the choir chanting the responses. At the conclusion of the services, Father CALLIGHT delivered a brief discourse, alluding to the fearful calamity which had occurred, and pointing the mourning friends to the Heavenly Father as the only source of consolation in such deep affliction, and requested the congregation to unite with him in repeating the Lord's Prayer. The procession then moved to the burial ground, where all five bodies were deposited in one grave.

The sorrowing relatives then directed their steps to the wretched living. At the meeting there were present the aged father, two brothers and two sisters, and several neighbors and friends of the family. The prisoner had passed a quiet night, and had been considerably relieved by medicine prescribed by Dr SMITH, the attending physician. He appeared more rational, and conversed with Sheriff GRACE during the day, by whom he had been informed that the funeral of his wife and children was taking place.

On the arrival of the party at the jail, Mr. GRACE went in to notify GRAY of their presence and to prepare him in a measure for the interview. When they appeared at the entrance to the corridor (where he could see them, however) he became excited, and cried loudly to be released, that they were coming to hang him. When they formed a weeping circle around him he quieted somewhat, but still his eyes rolled from one to the other with a vacant, meaningless stare. It was some time before the father's emotions would permit him to address his unhappy son. He then asked his son if he knew him. He answered, "Yes, father!" and immediately exclaimed, "I done it! I killed them all!" His father then asked him if he was sensible of what he had done. He answered in a loud voice, "I am!" "Are you sorry for it?" "I am!" He was then asked several questions, but his answers to most of them were rambling. His eyes would roll in speechless, nameless misery, and he would cry out, "I done the deed." "I done it in cool blood," "They are all gone to Heaven," &c.

He was then allowed to become quiet again, and then asked if he wanted to go home? With a sigh of unutterable woe he exclaimed: "Oh! I am going to hell! I can't repent. Take me out and hang me!" His brothers and sisters spoke to him, and shook his manacled hands, weeping bitterly. He recognized them all and called them by name. He also recognized the neighbors who were present, and also Mr. MCALLISTER, of this city, who knew the family in Pennsylvania. When asked why he did the deed, he replied: "I was tired of my life that morning." "But why did you kill your wife and children?" "I wanted them out of the way! Oh! I can't repent!" &c. And then he broke out in an agonized tone: "As true as God is my Judge, I did not know what I was doing that morning." He seemed greatly excited, and seemed to writhe in more than mortal agony. After this paroxysm he became rambling in his talk again, and his weeping relatives turned to leave. By the advice of Sheriff GRACE, they did not take formal leave of him. His father simply said he was going, but would come in and see him again every day. He took no notice of their departure, and did not seem to be aware that they had left for some time. All at once he cried out, "God Almighty knows they are all innocent. I done the deed. They know nothing of it. I struck her on the head with the grubbing hoe."

In all his talk concerning the murder he has strictly adhered to the first statement published on Thursday morning. No definite arrangements have been made concerning his custody hereafter, but an effort will be made to remove him to the Insane Asylum by Monday next.

The Burning of the Steamer General Grant.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, April 10.

The steamship General Grant, just arrived from New-York, took fire Thursday night, at 12 o'clock, and before the flames could be suppressed, burned to the water's edge. The fire, originating in the engineer's storeroom, could not be reached until it gathered such volume as to defy all efforts to extinguish it. Finally, bursting through the upper decks from the after part of the vessel, she was soon enveloped in flames. The engines, promptly on the ground from three distinct alarms, poured upon the ship a continuous stream of water; but from the time the flames burst through the lower deck and creeping into every part of the ship, showed the vessel on fire from stem to stern, all hopes of saving it was at an end. The commander of the ship, Captain H. S. QUICK, and his officers and men united the most unremitting exertions in those of the Fire Department in vain. The lifeboat and some other property about the vessel was preserved through the exertions of the river Police, but the clothing and valuables of both officers and men were destroyed in the conflagration. The cargo was a valuable one, estimated at from two to three hundred thousand dollars, but was fully covered by insurance. The disaster so affected the mind of Captain QUICK that when all hope of saving the vessel and cargo was lost, he attempted to commit suicide by jumping into the flames. He was, however, rescued by the officers of the ship, and taken away in safety. No blame can attach to them. The fire originated in one of those common but mysterious ways which set all efforts and care at defiance. Nevertheless the officers are at work trying to ferret out some clue to the terrible accident.

The cargo of the Grant consisted in part of 9,000 bushels of corn in the bulk, 100 barrels of oil

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

CHIPS FROM A GERMAN WORKSHOP. By MAX MULLER. New-York: CHARLES SCRIBNER & Co.

The circle of archaic literature has been widened a good deal latterly. Formerly the learned men were forever discussing the two classic languages. In time they ventured further; and by the middle of last century they had gone as far East as "Sanconiathon, Manetho and Berosus," which became the parole of high scholarship, and which, as our readers may remember, so greatly imposed upon our old friend, the Vicar of Wakefield, once upon a time. Then came the Frenchmen, BULLET and LEPELLETIER, with VALLANCEY and the rest; and the Celtic was brought into the field of view, accompanied by the kindred theme of Etruria, discussed by LANZI and his followers. And now we have all our "learned Thebans" of the East and West, busy with the Sanscrit, that most venerable and secluded speech, so long hidden in the remoteness of the East, and making, in general but a faint impression of its existence on the world at large. Sir WILLIAM JONES first made the learned world acquainted with this philological Pompeii. The Bhagavat-Gita was published in 1785; the Hitopadesa in 1787, and the Sakontala in 1789; and since that day an army of pundits has been employed in bringing that long-buried literature to the light by slow degrees. Says our author:

"The study of Sanscrit brought to light the original documents of three religions; the sacred books of the Brahmins; the sacred books of the Magians, followers of Zoroaster, and the sacred books of the Buddhists. Fifty years ago these three collections of ancient writings were all but unknown; their very existence was doubted, and there was not a single scholar who could have translated a line of the Veda, a line of the Zend-avesta, or a line of the Buddhist Tripitaka."

One great result of these Sanscrit researches was a theory of speech and race. The Sanscrit was found to read amazingly like Gothic or old German; and it was accordingly held by the learned that the people who first spoke it came wandering from the region of the Himalayas westward through Persia and the classic lands to Germany, another great branch of the same race going down into India, to live in the vast, undisturbed seclusion of that peninsula. This was the "Indo-Germanic" theory. But in a few years they found that it needed modification. The Celts would come in; and now it is called the "Indo-European," or "Aryan"—considered the chief division of race or language. The other divisions are the Shemitic, including the Hebrew, Chaldéen, Copt, Phoenician, &c.; and the Turanian, including the Chinese, Mongolese, Malays, Polynesians, &c.

We need not say that Mr. MULLER is an Aryan, every inch an Aryan. His early ambition on this subject of Sanscrit was excited by EUGENE BURNOUF, whose lectures he attended at Paris in 1847. Full of the Veda, he went to England for the purpose of examining the Sanscrit MSS in the India House and the Bodleian Library of Oxford; and through the influence of Baron BUNSEN, was made the happy means of printing in England several of the Vedic manuscripts, at the expense of the East India Company, in the years 1849, 1853, 1856 and 1862. The result of all this was that he became a Professor at Oxford, adopted there, like our own AGASSIZ in Harvard.

The volumes before us represent the sacred book of the Brahmins, the Veda, as the mother of all ethnic mythology, and a good deal of the legendary lore of the Aryan races. It is said to be the oldest writing in the world, Mr. MULLER arguing for an antiquity of twelve hundred years before Christ; and certainly it would be choice to believe it than to disprove it. The Veda has four divisions, named the Rig-Veda, the Yagur-Veda, the Sama-Veda and the Athar-Veda. The first is the chief, the others containing targums upon it, with liturgies, hymns, formulas, prayers, incantations, &c. Mr. MULLER describes the general character of the Veda as follows:

Though much time and labor have been spent on the Veda, in England and in Germany, the time had not yet come for translating it as a whole. It is possible and interesting to translate it literally, or in accordance with scholastic commentaries, such as we find in India from Yâska in the fifth century B. C. down to Sâyana in the fourteenth century of the Christian era. That is what Professor WILSON has done in his translation of the Rig-Veda; and he has shed light by strictly adhering to this principle and excluding conjectural readings even where they offered themselves most naturally, he has imparted to his work a definite character and a lasting value. The grammar of the Veda, though irregular, and still in a state of floating, has almost been mastered; the etymology and the meaning of many words, unknown in the later Sanskrit, have been discovered. Many hymns, which are mere prayers for food, for cattle, or for a long life, have been translated and can leave no doubt as to their real intention. But, with the exception of these simple petitions, the whole world of Vedic ideas is so entirely beyond our own intellectual horizon, that instead of translating we can as yet only guess and combine. Here it is no longer a mere question of skillful interpretation. We must collect all the passages where an obscure word occurs, we may compare them and look for a meaning which could be appropriate to all; but the difficulty lies in finding a sense which we can appropriate, and transfer by analogy into our own language and thought. We have to translate our feelings and ideas into their language at the same time that we translate their poems and prayers into our language. We must not despair even where their words seem meaningless, and their ideas barren or wild. What seems at first childish may at a happier moment disclose a sublime simplicity, and even in helpless expressions we may recognize aspirations after some high and noble idea. When the scholar has done his work, the poet and philosopher must take it up and finish it. Let the scholar collect, sift and reject; let him reject, if doubtful or not according to the laws of the Vedic language; let him study the commentaries, the Sûtras, the Brâhmanas, and even later works, in order to exhaust all the sources from which information can be derived.

From the Veda our author takes us to its offshoot—the Zend-Avesta, the Zoroaster book of Persia, first explained by ANQUETIL, DUPERRON and RASK. He considers that it must have been reduced to writing before the time of ALEXANDER the Great. A number of Zend words can be translated into the Sanscrit merely by changing Zend letters into their corresponding form in Sanscrit. The numerals are the same in both languages up to a hundred.

After the Zoroaster period of the Avesta, Mr. MULLER proceeds to the Achæmenian times of the cuneiform inscriptions which grew out of the Zend, and then to the Sassanian dynasty under which the Persian language was called the Pehlvi and Huzvaresh—two terms which mean "writing" and "language," in Shemitic and Celtic.

After an interesting chapter, comparing "Genesis and the Zend-Avesta," and another, on the "Modern Parsees" and their sacred books, the Vashna, the Visperad, and Vendidad, our author comes to "Buddhism." This old cult only began to be studied in a historic and critical way in 1824. In that year Mr. HODGSON announced that the original documents of the Buddhist canon had been found preserved, in Sanscrit, in the monasteries of Nepal, North India. He procured sixty volumes of these for the Asiatic Society of Bengal, sending duplicates of the same to the Asiatic Societies of London and Paris respectively. From these sent to the French capital EUGENE BURNOUF compiled his History of Buddhism. At the same time ALEXANDER CSOMA DE KÖRÖS, a Hungarian, went into Thibet and unearthed the sacred canon of the Grand Lama, who bears the name of the old Irish Ollamh and the Turkish Ulema. It consisted of two collections, the Kanjur and Tanjur—"a jungle of religious literature," says MULLER, of which KÖRÖS gave an abstract in the Asiatic Researches, showing that it was a translation of HODGSON'S originals. In addition to these, SCHMIDT, of St. Petersburg, found in Mongolia and Hon. GEO. TURNOUR in Ceylon, the books of the Buddhists—those of Ceylon being in the Pali language—a word which itself means "language," like the Persian Pehlevi and the Gothic Mâl.

The sacred canon of the Buddhists is called the "Tripitaka," the meaning of which, we are told, is, "Three Baskets"—one of these containing fables that swarm in all archaic literature. The word Buddha is not explained by Mr. MULLER; but it is evidently Veda, differently spelled, meaning "Writing" or "Science," Buddha—for the thing is personified, after the old traditional rule—is said to have lived in the fifth century B. C., and led a schism against Brahmanism, giving Buddhism an ascendency for some centuries. But it was at last exiled to the Turanian regions. Of Buddhism Mr. MULLER has a very high opinion. He says:

"The most important element of the Buddhist reform has always been its social and moral code, not metaphysical theories. That moral code, taken by itself, is one of the most perfect which the world has ever known. On this point all testimonies from hostile and from friendly writers agree. SPENCE HARDY, a Wesleyan missionary, speaking of the Dhamma Pada, or the Footsteps of the Law, admits that a collection might be made from the precepts of this work, which, in the purity of its ethics, would hardly be equaled from any other heathen author."

After a notice of "Confucius" comes another, on the lately announced American antiquity, the "Popul Vuh," a sacred, mythological book of the Quiches of Guatemala, which was published at Paris, in 1861, by the Abbe BRASSEUR DE BOURBOURG. From the evidence of ACOSTA and LAS CASAS, who have recorded the ancient American customs of reading the history of past times, Mr. MULLER is of opinion that this book is a gem in a relic of the old collection of manuscripts made in 1726, by BERTRAMS, the Milanese, and subsequently restored, some of them coming into her possession of HUMBOLDT. M. AUBIN, being sent to Mexico by the French Government, in 1860, spent twenty years in making a similar collection. The manuscript of the "Popul Vuh" which was copied by the Abbe BRASSEUR, twenty years ago in Guatemala, had been preserved by a Spanish priest, who discovered it toward the close of the seventeenth century. In the time of the conquest, IXTLILXOCHITZ, of the Royal family of Tezcuco, wrote the history of Mexico from the pictorial hieroglyphics of his country, using the Spanish letters to express his native speech. M. AUBIN has recovered some of the very picture books he used; and by comparing these with the interpretation given by the above-named Prince, it is thought the meaning of the old hieroglyphics can be discovered. The Abbe's manuscripts were written in Quiche words, evidently from such originals, and he spent years in learning the Guatemalan dialects, in order to be enabled to translate them. His work is, perhaps, the most interesting philological publication of our time, and held by MULLER in high respect. "It is with the study of such works," he says, "that American philology ought to begin;" mentioning, as of nearly equal importance, the "Codex Chimalpopoca" in Nahuatl, the old written language of Mexico, and the "Codex Cakchiquel," in the dialect of Guatemala. In this essay Mr. MULLER mentions the Thlinkithians or Kalosh people of our own Alaska, thought by WRANGEL to be related to the Aztecs. The Kilingas of the Deccan are coast people, or "link" people—the word link, in Shemitic, being "coast," and the same in the Scottish dialect. We suspect our Thlinkithe have the name of the Kilingas, with the difference of a lisp. The word Kalosh has the same meaning in Shemitic—"coastwise." The "Popul Vuh" contains many unrecognized Shemitic words—one of them being Olam, (Hebrew Alolm,) for God. The American department of philology may in time be as important as the Sanscrit, though some of the Aryan etymologists say there is little or nothing in it.

In the second volume of this work we have a lecture on "Comparative Mythology," full of etymons and radicles. But Mr. MULLER falls into the old error of giving moral meanings to the origin of words and names. The chapter on "Mythology," and others on "Greek Legends" and "Bellerophon," are very suggestive; and if Mr. MULLER had only a familiarity with the Celtic, which is the genuine offspring of the Shemitic, he could have made it vastly more interesting. We have next a chapter on "The Norsemen in Iceland," followed by the attractive themes of "Folk-lore," "Zulu Nursery Tales," "Popular Tales from the Norse," "Tales of the West Highlands," "Manners and Customs," "Our Figures." Under the heading of "Popular Tales from the Norse," our author says:

"Who can tell what gives to these childish stories their irresistible charm? There is no plot in them to excite our curiosity. No gorgeous description of scenery, a la KINGSLEY, dazzles our eyes; no anatomy of human passion, a la THACKERAY, rivets our attention. No, it is all about kings and queens, princes and princesses, about enchanters and witches, about fairies, about doughty boys and clumsy trolls, about old hags that hawl and screech, and about young maidens as white as snow and as red as blood. The devil, too, is a very important personage on this primitive stage. The tales are short and quaint, full of extraordinary characters and sorry jokes. We know from the beginning how it will all end. Poor Boots will marry the princess and get half the kingdom. The stepmother will be torn to pieces, and Cinderella will be a great queen. The troll will burst as soon as the young shepherd has blown in his horn, and the devil himself will be squeezed and chested until he is glad to go to his own abode. And yet we sit and read, we almost cry, and we certainly chuckle, and we are very sorry when—

"'Snip, snap, snout,
This tale's had out.'"

There is witchery in these simple old stories yet! But it seems useless to try to define in what it consists. We sometimes see a landscape with nothing particular in it. There is only a river, and a bridge, and a red brick house, and a few dark trees, and yet we gaze and gaze till our eyes grow dim, and we are charmed, and we cannot tell. Perhaps there is something in that simple scenery which reminds us of our home, or of some place which once we saw in a happy dream. Or we watch the gray sky and the heavy clouds on a dreary day. There is nothing in that picture that would strike an artist's eye. We have seen it all hundreds of times before; and yet we gaze and gaze, till the clouds, with their fantastic outlines, settle round the sun, and vanish beyond the horizon. They were only clouds on a gray afternoon, and yet they have left a shadow on our mind that will never vanish. Like those clouds, perhaps, with these simple stories? Do they remind us of a distant home, of a happy childhood? Do they recall fantastic dreams, long vanished from our horizon, hopes that have set, never to rise again? Is there some childhood left in us that is touched by these childish tales? Perhaps, and there is with most of us—we have only to open our book, and we shall fly away into dreamland, like 'the lassie who rode on the north wind's back to the castle that lies east of the sun and west of the moon.'"

In the chapter on "Our Figures," Mr. MULLER says the word cipher shows we have got our numerals from the Arabs, because cipheron is the Arabic for "empty," or "nought." But ciphering includes all the figures. The truth probably is, that the term comes from sopher, Hebrew for "word"—found in "suffrage," pas suber, sprache, &c. Words, or letters, were anciently used for numerals. This comprehensive and learned publication closes with an essay on "Caste," a term which seems to puzzle our author in common with all the other commentators. It is, like all the rest of this Hindoo nomenclature, of a very simple meaning, which, if our author were a little more Shemitic, he might have traced in the Hebrew, the Copt and the Irish. The general signification of caste is "tribe" and "race."

On the general character of "language," and apart from his particular theory, Mr. MULLER says a great many true things. Beyond a doubt words are the most ancient and venerable monuments of the human race, the Egyptian Pyramids being their juniors in this respect. He says:

Our language, the dialects spoken at the present moment in every town and village of these islands, not excluding the Celtic vernaculars of Wales, Ireland and Scotland; the languages again of Germany, Sweden and Denmark, of Italy, France, Spain, of Russia and her dependencies, of Persia and of India; these are the most ancient monuments, these are the ancient mounds through which we may run our trenches if we wish to discover beneath their surface the very palaces which were the homes of our forefathers, the very temples in which they prayed and worshipped. It is true, we are constantly changing, but never in the history of man has there been a new language. What does that mean? Neither more nor less than that, in speaking as we do, we are using the same materials, however broken up, crushed, and put together anew, which were handled by the first speaker, i. e., the first real ancestor of our race. Call that ancestor Adam, and the world is still speaking the language of Adam. Call those ancestors Shem, Ham and Japhet, and the race of mankind are still speaking the languages of Shem, Ham and Japhet. Or if we use the terminology of the science of language, we say again that all Aryan nations are still speaking the language of the founders and fathers of the Aryan family, in the same sense in which DANTE spoke the language of VIRGIL, or GUIZOT the language of CICERO; that all Semitic nations speak but varieties of the original speech of their first ancestors, and that the languages of the Turanian or Allophylic tribes are so many rivers and rivulets diverging from distant centres, changing so rapidly as almost to lose their own identity, yet in their first beginnings as ancient as any of the Aryan or Semitic branches of speech. The very words which we are here using have their first beginning nowhere within the recollection of history. We hear of the invention of new tools and weapons, we never hear of the invention of new languages or even of new words. New words are old words; old in their material elements, though new and constantly renewed, in their form. If we analyze any word, its last radical elements, those elements which resist further analysis, are prehistoric, primordial, older than anything human in the realm of nature or the realm of thought. In these words, if carefully analyzed, is to be read the history of the human mind, the gradual progress from simple to mixed modes of thought, from material to abstract conceptions, from close to obscure remoteness.

On the whole that strange theory of origin, in the matters of language, religion, race, does not seem to be quite trustworthy, though it has a great many good points, and contains a good deal of good philology. The Semitic roots of speech run too largely through the classic and Celtic languages to be set aside by any theory. The Greeks said their letters came from Phœnicia Minor—a grand argument not yet obsolete; and the correspondences of the Hebrew and Chaldean glossaries and mythologies with those of Greece and Rome are found to be manifold, even now, when scholars have only begun to look for them. All the tongues of the Mediterranean, and so round to Ireland, were kindred with those of Asia Minor, and the Irish is the sister of the Hebrew, as well as the mother of the Anglo-Saxon. The venerable Fidha or Veda, "the learned man," written Beda in very old England, says that the gods took the Irish Alphabet, and says also that the Germans, the Gauls, the Irish and others of Western Europe understood one another in the Seventh Century. The testimonies of traditions and language will not allow us to believe in that stream of Sanscrit said to have run along the mid-latitudes of Europe, distinct from the Semitic and the Turanian. What Rama said of the Western races in his time might have been true of the Asiatic races a thousand years earlier—they might have understood one another—Turanians and all. Just now we can discover Irish and Basque words in Mongolia, Japan, Peru, and Indian Massachusetts. Languages ran round the world without any theoretic rule, and they the evidently came from one source. The Aryans say that source was in the region above the Himalaya ridges; but it is just as possible, or more probable, that it was in the old place, among the rivers of Western Asia. From this centre languages would wander out in all directions, carrying with them the marks of a common origin, which marks, we maintain, are found in all the glossaries of men, East, West, North and South. Some believe men originated from lower types in more localities than one. But this theory is discountenanced by those wandering radicles of language which indicate a common source. A cosmopolite philology justifies the ancient sketch of the human race which is found in the Pentateuch.

The Hebrew and Chaldean are at the root of every language extant, Sanscrit as well as the rest.

So much, in a very skimming way, for a very genuine work—one that will set all intelligent readers a thinking. It gives an excellent general view of that grand Sanscrit department of learning—that fertile jungle of literature, to use Mr. MULLER'S expression—the growth of long meditative ages under the care of the ancient saruthustras, buddhas, talapoins, lamas, destoors and bonzes of the East; sums up very agreeably the more familiar folk-lore and fairy beliefs of our Celtic mother countries; and gives a comprehensive abstract of that newest philological department, which should be to us the most interesting—the historic and mythological books on the subject of the Mexican and Guatamalan antiquities, recently published in Europe. The latter will also have the interest of novelty for most American readers—the Abbe DE BOURBOURG'S book being too stubby with tizzils and huzzils to commend itself confidently in any popular way. The style of the whole is wonderfully good for one of the sori studiorum, in English—good enough, indeed, for any born Briton, having the best philosophic manner of simplicity and clearness, and showing, as may be seen in the paper on "Manners and Customs," a power of humor which would hardly be expected, and which will give the ladies especially a good deal of amusement, as at page 275 of the second volume.

Anybody wishing to kindle a little philological fire needs no better material than these two collections of Chips from a German Workshop. The volumes are brought out in the finest style of typography by the publishers.

BRIEF NOTICES.

—The Study of Languages. By C. MARCEL, Knt. Leg. Hon. (New-York: D. APPLETON & Co.) This is a careful and methodical treatise on the teaching of languages by one who has had a good deal of old experience in that business. It is entirely didactic, and its ideas make it particularly valuable to all instructors of the young. M. MARCEL'S belief is that nature is the best guide in the study of languages, and that a person should begin by learning to read and speak them without wasting time over the grammatical rules. Grammars are good in a certain degree; but they should not meet a learner on the threshold, and discourage or deaden his spirit by their difficult rules and distinctions. In a general way, and as a general rule, the swarm of word-formulas in our school books is of little use in strengthening the mind and forming the style of any man. For that purpose general reading is better than all the grammars in the world.

—The Brownville Papers. By MOSES COIT TYLER. (Boston: FIELDS, OSGOOD & Co.) This collection of papers, published originally in the Herald of Health, will be interesting to those who love the subject of gymnastic exercise, and especially to the community of the little New-England village of Brownsville. It tells, in a good-humored way, a story of difficulties encountered in that locality by those who first attempted to establish a gymnasium in it, and comes to the sensible conclusion that though gymnastics are among the best means of keeping the body in health, they are not capable of working miracles.

—The Golden Treasury. By FRANCIS TURNER PALGRAVE. (Boston and Cambridge: SEVER, FRANCIS & Co.) Glancing at this title-page we got at once the idea of something in the manner of a hundred years ago and over—some collection of moral maxims, in the style of EPICTETUS, mingled with some of GEORGE HERBERT'S hymns and some "elegant extracts" from HOOKER and TILLOTSON; and on opening the book, lo!

"Pibroch of Donal Dhu,
Pibroch of Donal,
Wake thy wild voice anew,
Summon Clan Conal!
Come away, come away,
Hark to the summons!
Come in your war array,
Gentles and commons!"

And "Hohenlinden," and—"Highland Mary,"—and that buoyant and bird-like and beautiful anapestic trill—that delicate and airy rhapsody of SHELLEY to the "Sky-lark," modulated in such a perfect charm of English words, and ringing so melodiously up, up, through such reculades of enraptured similitudes into the third, aye and the fourth heaven of English poetry—

"In the golden lightning
Of the sunken sun,
O'er which clouds are brightening,
Thou dost float and run,
Like an embodied joy whose race is just begun."

and the old "Flowers of the Forest," too, and "Auld Robin Gray," and "The Royal Feast for Persia Won," and, of course, the organ-sounding ostos of "Lost Lycidas"—

"Yet once more, O, ye laurels and once more!"

A very unexpected "cry" of song-birds—a florilegium of some of the brightest and happiest lyrics in the language. The collection is made with the judgment and good taste which may be expected in a Fellow of Oxford College, dedicating his book to ALFRED TENNYSON and regretting he could not dedicate it to HENRY HALLAM. What was thought good enough for them may be accepted as something good for the general reader. It is accompanied by an index, and explanatory notes for the older lyrics. The title of the book and its peculiarities of typography were of course meant to give it an archaic look. But a modern style would have been just as suitable for a thing that can never grow old—a garland that keeps its first freshness and fragrance and shows no touch of time.

—Studious Women. By Monseigneur DUPANLOUP, Bishop of Orleans. Translated by R. M. PHILLIMORE. (Boston: PATRICK DONAHOE.) This is an excellent book; and a curious one too; in which we have a man who has had no experience in families or women, giving the latter a large amount of advice as to their domestic duties and their relations to their husbands and children. But the advice is very valuable for all that; the object of the good Bishop being to correct the ignorance and frivolity that lessen the usefulness of women in their sphere. He wishes that women should cultivate their minds and make these intellectual and industrial acquirements which may enable them to divide the cares and labors of life with their husbands and children. The Bishop is a learned man, a sincere and earnest and humble man, and shows more liberality than one would look for in a man of such grave character and ecclesiastical dignity.

—Sermons. By Rev. THOMAS HOUSE TAYLOR, D. D. (New-York: G. P. PUTNAM & SON, Broadway.) These respectable and impressive sermons have been brought out in stately typographical style by the publishers, and they contain the portrait of the distinguished preacher himself. One of these sermons is in explanation of the text in St. Luke: "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Paradise, the preacher thinks, is an intermediate state, distinct from the place which is in the presence of God. Christ at His death went down among the spirits of the Greek Hades, corresponding to the Hebrew Sheol, where, according to St. Peter, He preached to those who were imprisoned, some of whom had remained in that durance since the days of Noah. Dr. TAYLOR considers that this peculiar place is that to which all departed souls repair from this earth, and in which they will remain till the day of General Judgment, when they will be transferred to the tribunal and thence distributed according to their deserts. This doctrine is disliked by a great many, because it resembles Purgatory, but there is a great difference, since it is not said that prayers can remove spirits from the aforesaid Paradise. Dr. TAYLOR has done good service in discussing such interesting questions, which some modern preachers with lax ideas ignore in a somewhat unwarrantable way, though they profess to accept the Scriptural canon. They are bound to accept the whole of it, without any mental reservation or slurring over, and explain it to the best of their ability. That doctrine of the intermediate place or Paradise is as true and trustworthy as any other to be found in the Bible.

—Studies in Shakespeare. By MARY PRESTON. (Philadelphia: CLAXTON, REMSEN & HAFFELFINGER.) Our authoress begins by saying she has not tried to say anything new in these critiques. And yet she does say things that strike us as new. She does not think Othello was a Moor, after all. She says: "We may regard, then, the daub of black upon Othello's portrait as an ebullition of fancy a freak of imagination—the visionary conception of an ideal figure—one of the few erroneous strokes of the great master's brush, the single blemish on a faultless work. Othello was a white man!" The italics are the lady's. Again—she considers Lady Macbeth to be a very loving woman, who does wrong in her great affection for her husband. We are also told that she dies violently by her own hand; which looks very like another novelty. Then, in Richard III., we have a comparison between that bad man and "the famously infamous General BEN. BUTLER!" This, also, may be considered pretty new, even by "General BEN." himself, who has had a large variety of bad names, but was never called "Crookback" before. And again, in the notice of Julius Cæsar, she says that the ghost of that Emperor had "stalked before her in GIBBON'S "Rome." That is a very striking novelty indeed; for never before, we believe—nay, we would "offer to swear upon a book"—did that "hook-nosed fellow of Rome" appear to any reader of the aforesaid work—GIBBON'S "Rome"—either as a ghost or otherwise. After reading some of the late criticisms on "the divine Williams"—we mean COLLIER'S extravaganzas—we resolved to read no more of them. But in this case we broke that solemn vow, and are not sorry for it, having received in the perusal of this ladylike little book a good deal more entertainment than we had anticipated from a glance at the title-page.

—The Breath of Life. By GEORGE CATLIN. (New-York: JOHN WILEY & SON.) The author declares in his preface that no persons on earth who read th's little book will condemn it. Why should they? He recommends people to keep their mouths shut and breathe through their nostrils; and this is probably very good advice. He shows, from the habits of those children of nature, the Indians, that this mode of breathing keeps their lungs and themselves in a state of soundness and health, and he infers from the contrary custom of persons in civilized life, that it is the cause of many diseases. It seems only natural to think that the passage of cold or impure air through the nostrils should either warm it or purify it before it touches the lungs; and Mr. CATLIN especially recommends that the lips should always be closed in sleep. It may be remarked that to do this with more effect the stomach should not be too full—otherwise the nostrils will hardly suffice the play of the lungs. But custom is everything; and if children were taught early to shut their little traps, in sleep and at rest, they would form a habit which would be beneficial as well as becoming in after life.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Reply to "A Veteran Observer" on the Fifteenth Amendment.

THE ELMS, Friday, April 9, 1869.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In the TIMES of yesterday the well-known "Veteran Observer" renews his attack on the Fifteenth Amendment. Whatever he writes is suggestive and entertaining, even when (as sometimes will happen) he is not quite right. How far he comes short of being exactly right this time I will not undertake to say, for I have no intention of opening a controversy with him. But as he insists on the question, (proposed by him in a former communication,) "How that amendment can be enforced," I find myself moved to attempt an answer.

The Fifteenth Amendment, if ratified by the thirty-seven States, will be simply one more prohibitory clause in the Constitution. Section 10 of the first article is made up of just such prohibitions, limiting the laws and constitutions of the several States. Can those prohibitions be enforced? Are they effectual? If those prohibitions answer their purpose, why will not one more prohibition of the same sort be equally effectual?

"No State shall enter into any treaty, alliance or confederation." Will "Veteran Observer" inform us how that clause of the Constitution can be enforced? Suppose the State of New-York, in contempt of the prohibition, should negotiate a treaty with Great Britain, ceding to that Government certain privileges on the line of railroads from the City of New-York to Suspension Bridge, in consideration of some distinguishing privileges granted to New-York merchants in British ports and custom-houses. Is there any power in the United States to set aside or frustrate that arrangement otherwise than by sending an army to occupy the State, and to govern it by martial law?

No State shall "coin money." Suppose the State of Massachusetts determines to have its own mint, and to provide for its people a circulating medium better than the protested notes of a Government which hopes to pay its debts sometime before the end of the world, but cannot tell when. Suppose that, having begun to coin money, it undertakes to enact that within its jurisdiction nothing but money of gold and silver shall be a tender in payment of debt. Doubtless the attempt would be preposterous, but some people, you know, think it not absurd to suppose that Massachusetts may do a preposterous thing. If, then, that State should coin money, and even attempt to force it into circulation, how could the Constitution be enforced? Is that clause of the Constitution worth anything?

No State shall "pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility." What if the State of Tennessee should grant a title of nobility to Mr. ANDREW JOHNSON, and make him Duke of Nashville? What if Mississippi should pass a bill of attainder against Mr. JEFFERSON DAVIS? What if Connecticut should enact a law inflicting penalties on all who voted for Democratic candidates in the late election? What if the Legislature at Albany should undertake to dissolve by law all contracts and agreements between Mr. CORNELL and the University which he has founded? Is there any way in which the constitutional prohibitions of such legislation could be enforced?

The "Veteran Observer" assumes that the Fifteenth Amendment, if ratified, will require some legislation on the part of the States before it can have any effect. But what need will there be of any legislation? In some of the States the law is the law of the land, and in other States the Fifteenth Amendment strikes out that word; and the negro who finds himself excluded from voting has precisely the same legal remedy with a white man in the same predicament. Whatever qualifications the State law or Constitution requires of a white man as the condition of his being invested with the right of suffrage, just those qualifications, and no other, the State law or Constitution, overruled and amended by the supreme law of the land, requires of a black man.

ANOTHER OBSERVER.

A Plea for the Celestials.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It is astonishing that there should be such a feeling against the advent of the Chinese. A great necessity of our country for the next half century will be these same Celestials. We need them for our gardens, houses, farms, factories, and all enterprises of internal improvement of a public nature. They will enable us to produce cheaply, compete with the rest of the world, and pay off our debt. They will enrich, develop and bless us in all our material interests, and we will try to educate and bless them with religious faith, and not fail to advance their worldly condition, in return.

We groan at the independence and indifference of our servants and employes—being in bondage to them through life. John Chinaman is docile and so are his children, male and female. We can do each other good. We can lift them up in the grade of humanity, and they can shove us upward in the scale of comfort and prosperity.

In 1920, without the Chinese, we will number 100,000,000 of people. If China gives us 1,000,000 a year until that time—that is for fifty years—we can easily dispose of and digest them, morally, socially and politically, and they will do all our work in subduing and utilizing our territory, developing our resources at less cost, and in a more quiet and obliging manner than any other people on the planet.

It is short-sighted as well as inhuman to shut them from our shores. Philanthropists should welcome them; political economists should urge their reception; manufacturers, contractors, farmers and miners should demand their assistance; merchants, gentlemen and housekeepers should pray for their willing service. Our forty millions really unite to call, beseech, urge, pray, plead, expostulate, reason and cry for the coming of the CELESTIALS.

The Attendance at Post Office Stations—Letter from a Lady.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I went to Station D this morning to procure postage stamps. The ladies' window was occupied by three persons, and as I considered my time of importance, and no one was at the gentlemen's window, I stepped there and asked to be served. "The next window is the ladies' window," said the young clerk on the inside, who thus implied that I could not read. "But that is occupied," said I.

No answer.

After waiting some time I again approached the gentlemen's window.

"The next window is the ladies' window," again answered the Adonis on the inside.

I quietly submitted, and after waiting as long as I thought I could, left the office with my letters and without my stamps. If I had been a gentleman, the clerk would have been obliged to wait on me—if I had been a young lady, he probably would have waited on me. Government officials are proverbially uncivil in Europe, but I thought their manners were better in this country. No one takes the trouble to make impolitenessa and rudeness known, and at last it becomes part of the service.

I would only ask: "Is there any regulation forbidding ladies to be served at the window for gentlemen, provided no gentlemen are hindered, or molested, or put to inconvenience? If take it for the establishment of a ladies' window, to give ladies a chance, and not for fear that the gentlemen would be driven away from any window at all. I like to see their rights protected, and if that principle was at the bottom of the system pursued against me this morning, I cheerfully submit to the annoyance, inconvenience and loss of time, and also "sacrifice the friends" whose letters were thus detained.

A LADY.

The Proposed East River Bridge.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The project of building a bridge between New-York and Brooklyn, besides numerous other objections, is attended with one to which sufficient attention has not been paid, viz.: That it will obstruct the navigation of the East River for the larger class of vessels, and, Congress having granted permission for the erection of the bridge expressly upon condition that it shall not interfere with navigation, this objection seems a fatal one.

The bridge, it is stated, is to be 130 feet above the river, that being the greatest height attainable without making the grades at the entrance so steep that the bridge would be practically useless as a thoroughfare.

Now, any one who will take the trouble to inform himself, will find that this height is not sufficient to allow most vessels of a large class to pass the bridge without lowering their top-gallantmast, and many their top-masts also, an operation costing time, trouble and expense.

When it is considered that more than 1,000 of the largest class of vessels yearly pass up the East River and return the same way, and that the number increases yearly with the commerce of the port, and that the tendency both at home and abroad is to increase the size of ships, some idea may be formed of the objection to the bridge on this ground alone.

Bridges can not be stopped by injunction before completion on this very ground, it will very likely result that, after completion, it will be ordered to be removed, as violating the primary condition upon which the consent of Congress was obtained.

NEW-YORK, April 13.

The Midland Railroad.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I read with interest in the New-York TIMES of the 10th inst. "Railroad Projects—The Midland Railroad and its New Jersey Connections—What has been Done, and the Present State of the Enterprise." It is so seldom that this project has been brought before the public, although it has steadily progressed for the past year, that its friends are anxious that the public should not be misled in any particular.

In your article the statement is made that "the New-York and Oswego Midland Railroad Company is already far advanced in its construction. One hundred miles are already completed."

For the purpose of placing this matter right, I would say that no portion of the road is yet "completed." Two hundred miles of the main line are under contract, and in addition to the Ellenville branch and the New-Berlin branch, making thirty miles more. A large portion of the grading, masonry and bridging has been completed. Steadily and quietly progressing, it is the intention of the Company to open next September 124 miles of the main line, from the City of Oswego to Sidney; also, the New-Berlin branch, twenty-three miles.

With this brief statement, for the purpose of correcting an unintentional error, the article places the whole matter before the public in a correct light.

GENERAL NICHOLS.

Order of Lieutenant-General Sheridan Announcing His Death.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI, CHICAGO, Ill., April 9, 1869.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 2.—It becomes the painful duty of the Lieutenant-General commanding to announce the death, at St. Louis, Mo., on the 8th inst., of Brevet Major-General W. A. NICHOLS, Adjutant-General of the Military Division.

General NICHOLS entered the service in 1852, and served with distinction on the Northern frontier until the outbreak of the Mexican war.

In the war with Mexico he was made Captain and Major by brevet for gallant and meritorious services at the battles of Monterey and Molino del Rey, and took a prominent part in nearly all the battles in the Valley of Mexico.

Appointed an Assistant Adjutant-General in 1855, he served in that capacity in Washington City, New-Mexico and in Texas, where he was made prisoner, and paroled by the Texan rebels. He served during the rebellion as Adjutant-General of the Department of the East, and as assistant in the Adjutant-General's office at Washington, during which time he received the promotions of Lieutenant-Colonel and Colonel in the Adjutant-General's Department, and was made Brevet Brigadier and Brevet Major-General for faithful and meritorious services during the rebellion.

In 1866 General NICHOLS was appointed Adjutant-General of the Military Division of the Missouri, and Chief of Staff to Lieutenant-General W. T. SHERMAN, and served in the former capacity until transferred to the same position on the Staff of the Lieutenant-General. In all the various and important positions in which, by his merits, he was called on to serve his country, General NICHOLS brought high soldierly capacity and honor. By his death the army has lost one of its brightest ornaments. To the private soldier he was a considerate friend, and to the officer a comrade whose army life was without blemish.

As appropriate to the memory of the deceased, the prescribed badge of mourning will be worn by the officers at division and departmental headquarters for thirty days. By command of Lieutenant-General SHERIDAN.

FASHIONS FOR APRIL.

From Le Follet.

There is not at present any material difference between the make of the Spring dresses and those of the season just passed. The skirts are made very long at the back, and quite short in the front. The pointed body is occasionally seen, although it has by no means usurped the favor which the sash has long enjoyed. Paniers, tunics, &c., are as much worn as ever. Paniers of a bright or pale shade of satin have a very pretty effect, worn over white tulle or tarlatane.

One favorite Spring costume seems to be that formed of plain cachemire, or with the under-skirt embroidered with silk. The shades most in vogue for these dresses are the "Empress" violet, mauve, blue, and pearl gray. They are rendered yet more elegant when completed by an under-skirt of taffeta, of a deeper shade than the dress, or of black; if of the latter, it is trimmed with a large bouillon or wide flounce, but if of color, with ruches or very narrow flounces.

Charming costumes are made of shot taffetas—brown shot with black. Black petticoat, with two or three bouillonnes, having a heading of small ruches of taffetas or satin; all the trimmings matching the bows, the ruches, or little flounces. The buttons all black. The basquine should be made long, and looped up at the sides. Sometimes the petticoat is striped, and the rest of the toilette of black taffetas.

The prettiest and most economical costumes may be made with a petticoat of a woolen material, with satin stripes—green and black, brown and black, &c.; the basquine or robe of black taffetas being looped at the sides in paniers, trimmed round with lace or a flounce of taffetas. Open body, with wide revers—that is to say, cut from the shoulders and rounded behind. Waistcoat of the same material as the underskirt. The cuffs and revers to match. This style is extremely pretty made entirely of taffetas—for instance, the petticoat, revers, &c., of green, violet, or blue.

The wide sash is sometimes replaced by bows of different materials. If the costume be of satin and taffetas, the bows are of the same, even if of two colors; this is only when the colors are a deep shade. The bows are placed in rows—four at the top, five or six in the

The Irish Church Question in the House of Commons—Exciting Debate.

LONDON, Friday, April 16—9 A. M.

In the House of Commons, to-night, in accordance with the notice previously given, Mr. GLADSTONE moved that the House go into committee on the disestablishment of the Irish Church.

Mr. NEWDEGATE, (Conservative,) member for North Warwickshire, moved as an amendment that the House go into committee on the bill in six months from the present day.

This motion was equivalent to an indefinite postponement. A lively debate followed, during which Mr. R. S. AYTOUN, member for Kirkaldy, created a sensation by declaring his objections to that clause in the bill which provided for the support of Maynooth College.

Mr. AYTOUN is a Liberal, and voted with the majority on the division on March 29, when the bill passed to its second reading. His declaration was followed by a scene of great excitement in the House. The Opposition cheered repeatedly, and counter cheers and other interruptions came from the Ministerial benches. When Mr. AYTOUN ended his remarks, the confusion subsided, and debate was continued.

Most of the speeches were made by the minor members of the Opposition.

At the end of this discussion, which lasted six hours, Mr. GLADSTONE rose and said due care would be given by the Government to the terms of the provision made for Maynooth College. He attributed much of the opposition to the bill to the power of the clergy in Ireland. That power had been built up by the old policy of England, which had lately been partially reversed, and was now about to be finally and completely abandoned. He concluded by declaring that the success of this bill was not a question of party, but of justice.

Mr. DISRAELI followed. He disapproved of a division on Mr. NEWDEGATE'S motion for postponement, and said he was anxious to get into Committee on the bill.

The House then divided on the original motion to go into Committee on the Irish Church bill, with the following result:

For the motion	368
Against it	220
Majority	148

The House then formally went into Committee on the bill, and adjourned.

Confiscation of the Property of Rebel Sympathisers—The Rebel Leader Adulcere Executed.

HAVANA, Friday, April 16.

In consequence of the appearance in New-York of a document issued and signed by MORALES LEMUS, imposing a contribution on Cuban refugees for the support of the revolutionary cause, General DULCE has issued a proclamation ordering the seizure of all property belonging to LEMUS, LEON CARANOVA, MESTRE BEAMONDO, CISNEROS CHIARDO, and others, unless they produce the necessary proofs that they have complied with the legal requirements in the transfer of their property to other parties. The Havana journals generally praise this decree of confiscation.

The rebel leader ADULCERE has been captured and executed at Manzanilla.

It is reported that a schooner with a cargo of arms has been captured near the mouth of Mariana River, at the western end of the island, while trying to run the blockade.

The Hotel Inglaterra took fire last night and was totally destroyed.

The brig S. Wood, from Nassau, for Wilmington, with a cargo of guano, was wrecked on Paredon Keys and is a total loss. Her crew were saved.

Acquittal of a Man and Woman Charged with Murder in Massachusetts.

WORCESTER, Mass., Friday, April 16.

The jury in the case of DAVID DORR and JOSEPHINE LA FLAMME, for the murder of the husband of the latter at Dudley, in April, 1868, went out at 9 A. M. The trial has occupied three days. After being out three hours and a half, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Death of Colonel E. W. Morgan.

Colonel EDWIN WRIGHT MORGAN, Professor of Mathematics and Mechanics at Lehigh University, died at the Sun Hotel in Bethlehem, Penn., yesterday. He entered West Point in 1829, and graduated third in his class in 1837. He served as Lieutenant-Colonel of the Eleventh Infantry in the Mexican War, after which he accepted the Superintendency of the Kentucky Institute, which post he filled to the opening of the civil war. Colonel MORGAN, by his high attainments and skill, helped much to produce and give excellence to the public works of Pennsylvania, Kentucky and other States. He was a skillful teacher, an honorable gentleman and a devout Christian.

The Grain Trade—Another Meeting of the St. Louis Merchants—Discovery of an Indian Burying Ground.

ST. LOUIS, Friday, April 16.

The most enthusiastic meeting yet assembled in the grain interest was held at the Southern Hotel last night. Speeches were made by a number of gentlemen, and the question, in all its bearings, was fully discussed. Complete success is pretty nearly demonstrated. Nearly all the stock has been taken, and the remainder will be subscribed before the close of the week. The following gentlemen were elected directors of the Association: E. O. Standard, Geo. P. Plant, Chauncey Filley, H. A. Hemier, L. B. Shryock, R. C. Greer, A. C. Hasselton, George Bain, Henry Hitchcock, John Wall and Thomas Richeson. The directors will elect officers at once, and the Association will go into immediate operation.

The following is the insurance on the steamer Antelope, burned on Monday, on the Niagara River:

National, of Boston	$6,500
New-England Mutual and Marine	2,500
Independent, of Boston	1,000
Home, of Connecticut	2,000
Total	$12,000

A party of laborers, in excavating the Great Mound, in the northern part of the city, unearthed an Indian sepulchre sixty feet in length, twenty-five feet below the surface. A large quantity of bones, beads, coin and other relics were found scattered about.

The Republican publishes a rumor that the Grand Jury of the United States Circuit Court, recently in session here, found an indictment against General BURBRIDGE, of Kentucky, for bribery, in connection with his duties as a revenue officer, and that he has been summoned to this city from Washington. It is not known whether the accusation is for bribery or being bribed.

At the St. Louis meeting of workingwomen last night, articles of association of the Workingwomen's Union were adopted. A permanent organization will be entered upon as soon as a sufficient number of signatures have been procured.

A reliable gentleman of this city, just arrived from Fort Sully, on the Upper Missouri, reports that a large number of the Indians, with whom General SHERMAN and other Peace Commissioners made treaties last Summer, are much dissatisfied with their situation and the manner in which they have been used. They say that the Government has got them penned in, and has failed to keep its promise to give them the annuities stipulated. Spotted Tail and other influential chiefs are losing confidence in the Government, and if the promises of its agents are not fulfilled this Summer, trouble will be the result.

About 200 men of the Forty-second Infantry, from Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., under command of General ROBERDEAU, arrived here to-day en route to the Indian territory west of Arkansas.

Mrs. General SHERMAN and family left for Washington to-day.

General R. W. BROWN, Chief Paymaster of this Division, has been ordered to New-York. He will leave for that City in a few days.

Articles of agreement between TOM ALLEN and MIKE McCOOLE were signed to-day, the fight to come off on the 19th of June.

Session of the Old School Presbytery at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Md., Friday, April 16.

At the session of the Baltimore Presbytery, Old School, on Wednesday, circulars favorable to a reunion of the Old and New Schools were received from the Central Presbytery of Philadelphia and the Synod of Wheeling. Action on the the circulars being called for, Rev. Dr. SMITH offered the following:

Whereas, Questions as to consummating an organic union between the Old and New School Presbyterian churches have come up at an appropriate meeting of the General Assembly, and the spirit of union sent down by the last Assembly has been rejected by the Presbyteries, and time all grave doubts and difficulties, and a majority of the members of the Assembly to effect a union on any basis which has not been first sent down to the Presbyteries and approved by them, and still greater doubts as to the expediency of such action in the existing circumstances; and

Resolved, As the sense of this Presbytery, that the Assembly ought not to consummate a union with the Assembly, North, at its approaching session, but should remain the whole subject over for action at another basis for action of the Presbyteries.

Resolved, That our Commissioners to the General Assembly be instructed to vote in accordance with the terms of the foregoing resolutions.

Dr. SMITH favored a reference of the subject to the Presbyteries for final action.

Mr. GALLAUDET opposed the reunion because there had been no change in the doctrine of the New School since the separation in 1837, and he could not see how it could unite with the Old School. The subject was discussed without a final decision, and coming up in order yesterday, a substitute was offered by Dr. BACKUS, as follows:

Whereas, This Presbytery has at its last meeting responded by the overtures sent down by the last General Assembly on the reunion of the Old and New School Churches; and

Whereas, A majority of the Presbyteries of the Old School branch have rejected the basis sent down; and

Whereas, It was proposed by some in each Church that the approaching General Assembly of the two churches should consummate a union upon a basis not definitely and formally submitted to the Presbyteries; therefore,

Resolved, That the Presbytery, in addition to its former action, express its disapproval of an organic reunion on any basis not first submitted to the Presbyteries, and agreed upon by three-fourths of the same.

After discussion the substitute was adopted. The following delegates were elected to the General Assembly, which meets in New-York on the 20th of May: Clerical Delegates—Rev. J. J. Henderson, Rev. Samuel Bayless. Ruling Elders—Messrs. Wm. J. Dickey and Benjamin Silver; and as Alternate Ministers—Revs. Drs. Cyrus Dickson and A. B. Cross. Elders—Dr. Hall Richardson and J. G. Matthews.

The Fires in the Nevada Gold Mines—Relief for the Sufferers.

SAN FRANCISCO, Thursday, April 15.

The English iron-clad Zealous, Admiral HAVINGS, from Victoria, and the United States steamer Ossipee, from Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, arrived to-day.

There is nothing additional in regard to the fire in the mines of Gold Hill, Nevada. The shafts are still closed. Considerable amounts of money have been raised for the relief of the families of those who perished by the disaster. The expense of the funeral has been assumed by the several companies concerned. There has been no lack of liberality on the part of the companies.

The performance at the Virginia City Theatre for the benefit of the sufferers netted about four thousand dollars. (gold.)

The International Cricket Match now progressing in this city, between the British Columbia and California Elevens, creates much interest. The officers and the band of the English frigate Zealous propose to visit the grounds to-morrow to witness the closing game.

Flour dull; no transactions except for the local trade. Wheat very dull; choice, $1 40.

Legal tenders, 77.

Cleared, ship Gerlachi, for Callao.

Sailed, Ballarvy for Liverpool.

Visit of the Illinois Legislature to the Tomb of Mr. Lincoln.

CHICAGO, Friday, April 16.

The State Legislature yesterday, in commemoration of the day, visited the tomb of Mr. LINCOLN. Brief religious services were held. The visitors generally were liberal in their subscriptions toward the Monument Fund.

The number of fires in the city for the municipal year have been 466, and the amount of the total loss $969,192.

A Prisoner Arraigned Before the Massachusetts Senate for Contempt.

BOSTON, Friday, April 16.

THOMAS DREW was arraigned at the Bar of the Senate to-day, charged with contempt in refusing to testify before the joint Special Committee appointed to investigate certain charges of bribery alleged against certain railroad companies to influence legislation in their behalf. An order to commit him to close custody for twenty-five days, unless he should sooner consent to be sworn, was defeated, and the matter postponed until 11 o'clock to-morrow. In the meantime DREW remains in the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms.

The Boston Associated Press, at a special meeting to-day, passed resolutions complimentary of the late Colonel ROGERS; and as a mark of further respect, voted to attend his funeral in a body. The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon at the Church of the Unity.

The Charges Against the Senate Auditor—Seizure of a Brig.

NEW-ORLEANS, Friday, April 16.

Two more indictments were found yesterday, by the Grand Jury, against WHELPLEY. There are six or seven now pending against him. It is stated that he has drawn warrants against the printing and legislative accounts largely in excess of the appropriations.

The brig H. S. Celeste was yesterday seized by Collector CLARK, for alleged violation of the Revenue laws, and because it was alleged she had on board arms for Cuba. The investigation revealed an attempt to defraud the insurance companies, the Captain stating that he had been offered $6,000 to take the vessel to sea and destroy her.

Destructive Fire at Murfreesboro, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, Friday, April 16.

A fire broke out this morning in Murfreesboro, and before the flames could be arrested the entire west side of the public square was destroyed, including ten stores and other valuable buildings. The loss, which is distributed among a half dozen persons, is estimated at $75,000. The amount of the insurance is unknown.

Hon. W. B. STONES arrived here this evening from Washington. He will speak to-morrow in response to Ex-President ANDREW JOHNSON. It is thought that Mr. STONES will be the Republican candidate for Governor.

The McGee Assassination—Discharge of One of the Alleged Conspirators.

OTTAWA, Canada, Friday, April 16.

The trial of PATRICK BUCKLEY, for complicity in the murder of Hon. T. D'ARCY MCGEE, took place to-day. Hon. J. H. CAMERON appeared for the prisoner, and Mr. J. H. READ for the Crown. A number of witnesses were examined, but no evidence was produced against the accused, the Judge directed his discharge. It is probable that DOYLE and others, who are charged with being accessories, will also be acquitted.

David H. Carpenter Hanged at Angelica for the Murder of His Brother.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Friday, April 16.

DAVID H. CARPENTER was to-day hung at Angelica for the murder of his brother, RICHARD E. CARPENTER, on the 25th of September last.

LABOR MOVEMENTS.

Mass Meeting at Cooper Institute—The Eight-hour Law Urged—Sympathy with the Parties on Strike.

An enthusiastic mass meeting of workingmen took place last night at Cooper Institute to sustain the painters in their present strike for $4 a day and eight hours' work, instead of $3 50 per day during the last eighteen months. The employers exact ten hours' labor, if they accede to the increased wages, and offer even $4 50, but this the journeymen refuse. The meeting was called under the auspices of the Workingmen's National Union, and Mr. T. J. DUSSUP, President of that body, took the chair. The following resolutions were then read and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The operative painters of this City, believing that the time has arrived to enforce the legality, and claim the benefit of the eight hours "shall constitute a legal day's work," as far as their trade is concerned; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Workingmen of New-York City, in mass meeting in Cooper Institute assembled, believing in the justice of the demands of the painters, do pledge themselves to aid them in enforcing the legality of eight hours as a day's work in their trade.

Resolved, That the practice of the Police Department in detailing members of the Police force for the purpose of performing mechanical labor on the different Police Stations, under the Metropolitan Act, for which they were appointed, is hereby condemned.

Resolved, That the Police Commissioners be requested to compel all members of the Police force to do Police duty for the little expect to pay them as policemen, not as mechanics.

Resolved, That we demand that the Fire Commissioners, Messrs. BYRNE & FRANKS to pay the demands of the painters, of eight hours and $4 per day as a day's labor—or that all painting of engine-houses or other works under the control of the Fire Department be given to other parties that will pay the time and wages.

Resolved, That we call upon his Excellency GOVERNOR HOFFMAN, in the name of the workingmen of this State, to issue a proclamation to the heads of the various Departments, calling upon them to enforce the "Eight-hour Labor act," as far as the employes of the State are concerned.

Resolved, That it is the province of every workingman to regulate his hours of labor, and the value of his production.

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to support our organization, using every honorable means to keep it intact and increase its numbers, so that it may continue to be a power felt by the employers, but not shaken.

Resolved, That while the employers are using all means to bring us back to the slough of misery and degradation, we continue to do battle against them, confidently hoping that we will share with the same privileges God granted to all men, the poor and as well as the rich, the workingman as well as the capitalist, with sufficiently manly courage to demand our rights and maintain our position.

The Chairman said that the painters were the first mechanics who carried out the rule of eight hours for a day's labor, but that an effort was now being made by the employers to break down the system, and, unfortunately, workingmen were considerably arriving from other localities who were willing to work ten hours. The present moment he considered opportune for an assertion of workingmen's rights. A man selected for one of the highest positions under the Government had initiated his term of office by endeavoring to increase the hours of labor of the mechanics in Government employ, and a protest should be made against his action. He would also call public attention to the strike of the Second-avenue car-drivers, who were manfully striving to shorten their exaggerated hours of toil.

Mr. FRANK R. PURCELL, of the Operative Painters' Union, said that no question now interested the laboring classes more than the time which should be fixed as the limit of a day's labor. There was a diversity of views both among laboring men and employers on the point. Great efforts had been made to carry out the statute of this State with regard to eight hours labor, but as yet with only partial success. He had hoped that the painters would lead the van in victory, but their employers had lately taken advantage of a superabundance of labor, and required that the journeymen should work ten hours. The latter were by continuing themselves to eight hours work, to improve their mental as well as material condition, and also to increase the demand for labor.

Mr. DUNCAN, also of the Painters' Union, said that opposition had arisen where it was least expected. The workingmen of Brooklyn were jubilant over the fact that Congress and the Legislature of this State had passed laws to make eight hours a legal day's labor in Government departments, but a legal official had used his influence to infinitely blast their hopes. The speaker then read resolutions to the effect that the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. BORIE, in attempting to annul the Eight-hour law of Congress, had shown a disposition worthy of emphatic contempt and reprobation; that his dismissal should be demanded, and that he should be held up to the execration of all law-abiding men.

JOHN EDNIE, of the Plasterers' Union, JAMES E. PURDY, of the Iron Moulders', ROBERT BLISSERT, of the Tailors', WILLIAM STIRK, of the Printers', SAMUEL GAUL, of the Bricklayers', J. A. TAYLOR, of the Slate Builders, and PATRICK WALSH, of the Laborers' Union, then followed to a similar effect with details and experiences more or less interesting, and the meeting, which had often applauded the speakers with great enthusiasm, adjourned.

A circular was distributed in the hall during the evening calling for sympathy for the drivers on strike upon the Second-avenue Railroad, saying that under existing regulations they were unable to visit their homes during the hours of daylight, and were almost strangers to the faces of their own children.

Fire in Johnsonstreet.

At 5 o'clock last evening a fire broke out in the basement of No. 49 Johnstreet, occupied, together with the first floor, by HARRIS & BROWNEGGER manufacturers. The fire was confined entirely to the premises of the firm, and caused a damage to their stock of $6,000, but the loss is fully covered by insurance, they having policies in the following Companies: Park, $2,000; Greenwich, $2,000; Ætna of Hartford, $2,000; Lafayette, $1,000; Niagara, $2,000; Tradesmen's, $2,000; Williamsburg, $2,000. The building is owned by THOMAS A. DAVIS, and was damaged $1,000, but was fully insured.

The Station-House Suicide.

The inquest in the case of EDWIN ROGERS, the unfortunate man who committed suicide in a cell in the Seventeenth Ward Police Station, was concluded yesterday. No new facts were elicited, and acting on the evidence of the physician having the post-mortem examination in hand, the jury rendered a verdict of death from the effects of some narcotic poison. The Coroner was furnished with the chemistry notes left by the deceased with his friend, Dr. CONRIN, the test medium, and the document ran as follows:

FOUR ROSES: I know him as piano-tuner; I know him as something of a poet; I know him as a comrade. He is a man of many and great talents. He had the taste of a gentleman and the pride of a gentleman. He died as he lived—unpitied and unexplained.

Another Railroad Veto Message from Governor Hoffman.

State Aid to Railroad Corporations Declared to be Unconstitutional.

War Between the Executive and the Legislative Powers Apprehended.

Republican Caucus to Choose Another Police Commissioner.

Supervisor Henry Smith Selected to Succeed Mr. Acton.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

ALBANY, Friday, April 16, 1869.

The message sent to the Senate this morning by the Governor, vetoing the bill granting State aid to the amount of $250,000 to the "Whitehall and Plattsburg" Railroad was not altogether unexpected after the vetoing propensity recently displayed by His Excellency, but it is nevertheless a serious check on the hopes and wishes of a large number of the representatives of the people in both Homes, comprising many of the best and most trustworthy members. The principle of granting State aid, in the way of money, to railroads running through new sections, has been argued at great length during the present session, and ably supported by such men as Judge Campbell, Mr. Selkreg, Mr. Truman, Mr. Hageman, Bancroft Davis, Mr. Hitchman, Mr. Bergen and others in the Assembly, and by Senators Hale, Hubbard, Nichols, Murphy, Chapman, Stanford, O'Donnell and others in the Senate; and a large number of special bills, similar to that vetoed by the Governor, are now pending. The fate of these is, of course, settled by the veto. There is also a general bill, intended by its authors to serve in case of necessity as a substitute for those special bills, which proposes to give $4,000 per mile to all the roads that shall be constructed a distance of twenty miles in the next two years. This bill passed the Assembly on Wednesday night, after being amended so as to provide that the State, instead of making a gift of the money, should take stock in each road to that amount. The query now is whether the Governor can give his signature to this bill consistently with the reasons assigned in to-day's veto. It will be seen that the Governor does not object to the abstract principle of granting State aid to public improvements, but thinks, in view of the present condition of the treasury and the heavy burdens of taxation, that this is not the proper time to apply the principle. It is difficult to see why this objection will not apply with equal force to the general bill as to the special one just vetoed; for a man who is short of funds can no better afford to invest money in unpaying railroad stock than to give it away. Still, there are many who think the Governor may be persuaded to reconsider this objection and sign the general bill as a sort of compromise. It certainly meets the Governor's oft-expressed views in favor of general as against special legislation, if it has no other merit.

THE ASSEMBLY

was engaged during the morning session in the third reading of bills. Among those passed was the bill for widening Flushing-avenue in Brooklyn, from Bridge-street to Broadway, with the amendment offered by Mr. JACOBS that the consent of the owners of a majority of the property on the line of the street should first be obtained. Also, the Brooklyn Steam Transit Railroad bill for running a steam road, either underground or surface, from City Park through Nassau and Flushing avenues to the Queens County line, with various branch roads running in different directions.

THE COUNTY TAX LEVY.

The New-York County tax levy was reported in the Senate to-day by Mr. CROWLEY, as amended in Committee on Municipal Affairs. It reduces the sum total of the budget, as sent up here from New-York, over $600,000. All the items alleged to have been increased after it went out of the hands of the Mayor and Comptroller, are cut down even below the figure fixed by those officials. The following are the principal changes made in the budget: Advertising, $45,000 asked for, $20,000 allowed; contingencies for Comptroller's Office, $10,000 asked for, $5,000 allowed; contingencies of TAX Commissioner's Office, $7,500 asked for, nothing allowed; Coroners' fees, $51,600 asked for, $38,000 allowed; county contingencies, $60,000 asked for, $35,000 allowed; disbursements and fees of county officers and witnesses, $72,000 asked for, $40,000 allowed; election expenses, $130,000 asked for, $65,000 allowed; lighting, cleaning and supplies for County Offices, $90,000 asked for, $45,000 allowed; printing for Legislative Department, $80,000 asked for, $30,000 allowed; repairs to county buildings, $40,000 asked for, $20,000 allowed; rents, $9,000 asked, $7,000 allowed; repairing and preserving records, $30,000 asked for, $10,000 allowed; repairing and rebinding records in Register's office, $60,000 asked, nothing allowed; salaries of Executive Department, $241,900 asked, $227,200 allowed; salaries of Judiciary, $609,685 asked, $544,885 allowed; stationery, law and blank-books, $80,000 asked, $20,000 allowed; support of prisoners in County Jail, $38,350 asked, $14,650 allowed.

The only salaries increased in the Judiciary Department is that of the Clerk to the Recorder, which is fixed at $5,000. The law permitting the Comptroller to issue revenue bonds to pay adjusted claims is repealed. The amount allowed to be spent for armories and drill rooms is limited by the bill to $150,000. By the present law it is practically unlimited, and last year $600,000 was spent in this way.

RAILROAD DIRECTORS.

The following bill, introduced by Mr. TWEED, passed the Senate to-day by a vote of 21 to 1—Mr. FOLGER being that 1. Its precise object may perhaps be divined by the New-York stockbrokers:

The People of the State of New-York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enacted as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 7 of the act, entitled "An act in relation to the Erie, New-York Central, Hudson River and Harlem Railway Companies," passed April 21, 1851, is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

No stockholder, director or officer on either the New-York Central Railroad Company, the Hudson River Railroad Company or the Harlem Railroad Company shall be a director or officer of any of the other Companies, and the term of office of the director in each of the said Companies shall be identical in the numbers of such Board, by lot or otherwise, that, at any time, not more than one-third of their number shall go out of office at each annual election, and at the next election of directors in each of the said Companies, directors shall be voted for only in place of those whose terms shall then expire under the classification aforesaid.

BOARDING VESSELS.

The bill authorizing news yachts to board vessels coming into New-York Harbor was ordered to a third reading in the Senate to-day, with an amendment providing that the Board of Health "may" instead of "shall" grant permits for that purpose.

S.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.....ALBANY, Friday, April 16.

ANOTHER RAILROAD VETO.

A message was received from the Governor vetoing the bill for aid to the Plattsburg and Whitehall Railroad:

STATE OF NEW-YORK,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
ALBANY, April 16, 1869.

To the Senate:

I return without my signature Senate bill No. 121, entitled "An act to aid in the completion of the Whitehall and Plattsburg Railroad, and to amend chapter 140 of the laws of 1867, and to renew the appropriation made thereby."

In my annual message, in referring to the condition of the State, the burdens resting upon the people, and what they could expect and demand of their representatives, I thought it proper to say as follows:

"While in all public affairs a reasonable liberality is to be encouraged, extravagance and waste will be condemned. A large amount of invested capital has been declared by Congress exempt from the taxation which now oppresses nearly every interest in the country. Those who bear its burdens, and who, in the burden, will never be pardoned for the public burdens. Some will be always ready to favor projects involving great outlays of public money in cases of doubtful or supposed merit, but the great body of the people will scrutinize any expenditure of public money, the necessity of which is not clearly appreciated."

In considering any bill which appropriates money from the State Treasury to aid private capital in constructing new railroads, my duty to the people at large requires that I should not overlook the facts that we are in the midst of a period of great speculation; that we are under the influence, to some extent, of a depreciated and inflated currency, one of the avoidable effects of which is to create an activity more or less feverish, under the stimulus of which men are not likely to discriminate carefully between legitimate enterprise and speculative projects. When this is over, and we return to a sound currency and a more healthy condition, we may estimate more justly the heavy burdens of taxation resting upon us, and will witness a diminution of the profits which some undertakings now earn, and of the promises of profits in others.

I fully comprehend what great benefits may be realized from wisely projected and economically constructed railroads, as well by the State at large as by the localities through which they pass. I would be glad to see their construction pushed forward with energy whenever there is good of them. I should rejoice in seeing the people of the State assist all such enterprises whenever it was apparent that the general interests of the State would be promoted by their success or injuriously affected by their failure. There are, I know, some portions of our territory full of undeveloped riches and yet so sparsely settled that individual energy and home capital are wholly inadequate of themselves to open avenues of transit and communication to and through them, or even to contribute so much toward local improvements as to inspire capitalists elsewhere with that confidence which would lead them to come to their aid. To open such regions to active traffic, to bring them into nearer connection with our great markets, to give to them facilities for communication and transportation which other more favored portions of the State enjoy, may often be so important to the whole State and be so well calculated to add largely to its material and general prosperity as to justify, at times and under proper restrictions, the granting of some aid from the Treasury of the State. While, however, it may be wise sometimes to grant this aid to enterprises simply because of their great merit and their great need, the money of the people should never be used to foster and encourage a spirit of speculation, or enterprises which may possibly have their origin in it. Even in cases of great merit, there is one difficulty which suggests hesitation, and that is that a contribution from the State Treasury in one instance, becomes a precedent for many others. Meritorious projects, and those purely speculative, become linked together and alike appeal to this precedent, with equal confidence, and, too often in the present condition of financial affairs and legislative temper, with equal chances of success. Every new railroad corporation thinks it has a right to some portion of the public money, and made its friends to the Legislature, intent on securing means from the public Treasury which receives its supply from the contributions of the heavily-burdened tax-payers of the State.

As a general rule, the sagacity of private capital will be quick to see where railroads are needed, and can be made to pay, and where they will add to the public wealth. It is hardly possible for the Legislature or an Executive to decide these points so well as can be done by the keen sagacity, the willing enterprise, and the careful scrutiny of private capitalists.

General laws have been passed for the incorporation of railroad companies. Liberal facilities are already extended (whether always wisely or not I need not here discuss) to the people in cities, villages and towns, by the issue of their corporate bonds, to associate their corporate responsibility with individual capital, to construct their railroads. Under these circumstances it seems to me that almost any meritorious enterprise can succeed without State aid, and that such aid should only be granted, if at all, when the necessity is clearly and urgently shown, and when the well-being of the State at large demands it.

The aggregate of appropriations proposed to be made from the State Treasury to railroad corporations, by bills introduced at the present session, is over four and a-quarter million of dollars, as follows, in the following amounts:

Whitehall and Plattsburg	Senate bill 121	$250,000
Albany and Susquehanna	As'bly bill 29	100,000
Ithaca and Towanda	As'bly bill 485	150,000
Fort Plain and Richfield	As'bly bill 486	200,000
Buffalo and Washington	As'bly bill 487	200,000
Buffalo, Corning and Pittsburg	As'bly bill 488	200,000
Northern Air Line	As'bly bill 489	175,000
New-York Central Extension	As'bly bill 670	600,000
Gloversville, Mayfield and Northville	As'bly bill 672	150,000
Lake Shore	As'bly bill 673	700,000
Southern Central	As'bly bill 674	600,000
New-York and Oswego	As'bly bill 675	600,000
Funda, Johnstown and Glov. ville	As'bly bill 676	75,000
Erie Valley	As'bly bill 677	150,000
Walkill Valley	As'bly bill 746	125,000
Rondout and Oswego	As'bly bill 747	150,000
Total		$4,375,000

Most of these bills have progressed so far as to indicate clearly that the friends of one rely, for success, upon the aid and cooperation of the friends of the other.

The whole amount of taxes levied by the State for schools, canals, bounty debts, railroads and general purposes in 1868, was $10,548,317 01, being two and four-fifths mills upon the assessed valuation of property. The amount of State aid proposed by the bills above referred to, viz.: $4,375,000, is more than two-fifths of the whole State tax of 1868. If a tax were imposed in any single year to provide for this aggregate of State aid, it would make the State tax eight and one-fifth mills instead of five and four-fifths, as in 1868. This bill provides for extending the tax over two succeeding years, which same provision will no doubt be adopted in the other bills. In such case the tax would be increased to seven mills for two successive years.

These figures may well excite alarm. If this bill be successful, it will be likely to be regarded as a precedent, and to lead to the success of most if not all of the others, and thus to subject the Treasury to an expenditure of nearly $4,000,000 more, distributed among enterprises of similar character, whatever may be their respective degrees of merit.

It is a fact as apparent as it is deplorable, that whenever heavy demands are made upon the public Treasury for other than the ordinary expenditures of the State Government, influences are at work in and around the Capitol, to secure their success, which are not calculated to promote an impartial exercise of the legislative power; and it may be predicted with almost absolute certainty, if these present applications are successful, that at some future day, and that not very far distant, a portion of the very money now drawn from the Treasury of the State, will be used as means to secure renewed and increased appropriations for like purposes.

It is confidently alleged that the people of the State will and do approve of these enormous appropriations, and are willing to have imposed upon them these new burdens for the sake of aiding enterprises the direct profits of which will inure to the benefit of private capitalists. I do not believe it. But even if it were so, I am confident that hereafter, when the feverish period of speculation shall have passed away, and a sounder public sentiment shall prevail, they would, if I sanctioned the legislation to which I now object, hold me accountable and responsible for failing to check the wasteful expenditures, in regard to which the probability of waste and extravagance is much greater than the possibility of prudence and discrimination.

It must be remembered that under the Constitution, it is in the power of the Legislature to submit to the people of the State the question whether they are willing to aid these enterprises by the creation of a State debt. Such a mode of coming to their relief would admit of a larger grant of money and a more systematic and equitable application of it to the different sections of the State. The taxation required to meet the outlay could be extended over a period of eighteen years, instead of being forced upon one or two. The fact that no such measure has been brought forward during the time the State aid policy has been pressed, is strong evidence that the advocates of that policy believe that the people at large would not approve of it. If this be so, the people would certainly resent a proposition to collect at once, and without asking their approval, the large sum now proposed to be levied upon them.

For the reasons, therefore, that it is not easy to discriminate so clearly between this measure and those of a similar character now pending and perhaps awaiting the decision of this one, as to make this an exception; that it presents a question of general policy in giving a bounty from the State Treasury to aid in the construction of local railroads, when the burdens of taxation are too great to admit of the heavy addition which the passage of the bill would entail; that the Constitution then provides a wise and just method by which the people of the State can take upon themselves the decision of the question, under which the tax can be graduated according to the magnitude of the improvement to which aid is given; that the measure may be deferred without prejudice to its future consideration at a period when the affairs of the State and country will be in a more permanent condition, when taxation will only be required for current necessities, and when it is hoped a settled prosperity shall be established; I am constrained, without expressing any opinion upon the merits of the Whitehall and Plattsburg Railroad, except to admit most freely that the region through which the road will run has very strong claims upon the consideration and sympathy of the State, and that the construction of a railroad through it would contribute very greatly to the general wealth and prosperity, to return the bill without my approval.

JOHN T. HOFFMAN.

Mr. HALE moved to lay the veto message of the Plattsburg and Whitehall Railway bill on the table. Carried after debate—33 to 5, the negatives being Messrs. Campbell, Chapman, Crowley, Edmonds and Humphrey.

DISCUSSION ON THE VETO.

The President put the question: "Shall this bill pass notwithstanding the objections of the Governor?"

Mr. HALE said: Mr. President—The Message which has just been read contains some considerations which are perhaps new, and a good many which are old. A portion of it seems to be original—a portion of it strikes me, on hearing it read, as rather in the nature of a quotation from a similar document that was sent to this body last year. I think that the question which was put by the Chair requires some consideration—that it is due to His Excellency the Governor that some reflection should be had upon the suggestions which he has made, and that before the Senate should decide whether it will or will not reconsider its previous action, that any opportunity should be had for examination and investigation into the merits of the objections made by the Governor. With the view of giving that opportunity, I move to lay the message, with the question put by the Chair, upon the table.

Upon request, Mr. HALE withdrew his motion, and

Mr. FOLGER said: Mr. President—There are several messages from His Excellency the Governor which have been by motion laid upon the table, and these messages have been acted upon by the Senate. They are messages returning to this body sundry bills passed by it, without the signature of the Governor—in other words, "Veto Messages," and we now have this. I fully concur with the President of the Senate in his ruling the other day, that this body is not, by the words of the Constitution, compelled at once, on the reception of a veto message, to proceed to the reconsideration of the bill vetoed. And I also yield a qualified concurrence to the spirit of his remark, that it would be salutary if the rule was, that there should be a cooperation upon this body to proceed at once to such consideration. If this body has seen fit to go through the parliamentary forms of enacting any measure into a law, it owes it to the subject, it owes it to its own dignity, it owes it to the Executive, that when the Executive finds that he cannot yield his assent to the enactment, and gives his reasons therefor, that the subject should again be taken up, and those reasons considered and reviewed, and concurred in or dissented from. And while this should not be long delayed, yet it does seem appropriate that legislators to whom those reasons may be new, or if not new, such as they have opposed and combatted, should have some space of time to consider them, and to review their own position, before voting to sustain or dissent from the veto of the Governor. But this may not be indefinitely delayed. The Constitution says that the Senate "shall proceed to reconsider." And many reasons might be given why this should be done at a day as early as practicable. It can be seen, that an veto after veto comes in, there is the opportunity for, and there is the tendency to, a combination of interests to oppose the different vetoes, and the usual result of log-rolling is produced, that measures in combination are sustained by the cooperation of the friends of each, which, if dependent for favor upon individual merit, would be rejected. So that the true end to be attained is for such delay only as will suffice for the formation of a well-considered judgment, and as will not permit the combination of different interests, to suffice the matter to die from the mind of the Legislature. And, Mr. President, in addition to these general considerations, there is at this time a special reason why action should be had without lengthened delay. I read in the Albany Argus of this week

OUR TAX BURDENS.

The City Tax Levies—Letter from the Citizens' Association.

THE CITIZENS' ASSOCIATION OF NEW-YORK,
No. 812 BROADWAY, April 16, 1869.

Hon. Truman G. Younglove, Speaker of the Assembly of the State of New-York:

DEAR SIR: The Citizens' Association of New-York begs leave to invite your attention and that of the honorable members of the Assembly to the acts enabling the Supervisors of the County of New-York to raise the sums necessary for the support of the City and County Governments for the current year. These acts were introduced into the Assembly about the middle of March, and referred to the Committee on "Affairs of Cities." The Association has opposed through its counsel, before the Committee, and made elaborate arguments upon the tax levies, and presented a full printed analysis of the respective budgets for City and county.

The Association trusts that the honorable Committee will be guided in their deliberations upon these important bills, by a sincere desire to promote the best interests of the people of this City and the cause of honest economical government. The two acts as they were presented to the Assembly involved the sum of over $4,800,000. But after a very thorough and searching examination made by the Association, it thinks the sum can be reduced over $1,000,000 without impairing in the remotest degree the efficiency of the local government.

The figures of the Association are based upon fair and liberal estimates, made with great care, and are ample for the required objects.

In order to bring this subject clearly and briefly before you and the members of the Assembly, for your and their careful consideration, the Association submits the statement below, showing what sums are asked for by the local authorities and what reductions in such sums the Association has recommended:

Upon the Legislature rests the entire responsibility of granting to our local authorities the vast sums of money for which they apply. The State of New-York has reserved to itself the authority and power of fixing annually by law the amounts to be raised in the City of New-York by tax; and in the exercise of this authority the State Government is responsible to the people of this City for every dollar it authorizes to be raised for extravagant and needless purposes. Our burdens of taxation in this City are very great, and they fall with crushing weight upon our people. The Association, therefore, respectfully and earnestly urges that the Legislature will scrutinize every item carefully, and reduce the sums allowed to the lowest point. The Association also trusts that the Committee on Affairs of Cities will report the tax levies at an early day to the House, so that there may be ample time for their examination, and a careful investigation into bills of such vast importance. Should the Committee delay their report, as the session is now drawing so near its close, the Association respectfully requests that the House will call for the report.

Very respectfully submitted,
PETER COOPER, President.

The Rebel Pirate Alabama.

From the Boston Traveller, April 15.

One of the crew of this freebooter is now on board the steamer Virginia, lying at East Boston. He says that the Deerhound was in fact a paid tender to the Alabama, that she had on board the chronometers and other valuables which had been stolen from American ships (for the thieves were not permitted to land them at Cherbourg,) that a few days before the fight with the Kearsarge she brought fifty men from Portsmouth, (England,) trained gunners, who had received their training in the practice-ship Excellent, to work the guns, that these men with the Alabama left Cherbourg, were stationed at the guns, and had entire control of them, for the officers knew very little if anything of gunnery, and that the vessel in which the Alabama fired three shots to one fired by the Kearsarge was lost.

The Alabama was somewhat quick in her rolling, and hence why the firing was so rapid. The gunners could not elevate or depress the guns with any degree of accuracy, therefore they trusted to luck to hull the Kearsarge, for their line firing was uniformly correct, but the shot generally passed over the Kearsarge or among her rigging without doing much damage. On the other hand, he says, the firing of the Kearsarge was very true; every time a shot struck the Alabama, it took a clear sweep fore and aft, and toward the close of the action crush upon crush tore her almost in two amidship, when she filled and went down. She lost forty-seven men out of 219 with which she began the action. He thinks her powder was bad, her officers were fools, and the Englishmen who worked the guns too self conceited to imitate the cool deliberation of aim that prevailed on board the Kearsarge from first to last.

Address to Governor Burnside.

The following is the address to Governor BURNSIDE, of Rhode Island, which is receiving the signatures of soldiers and citizens quite generally throughout that State:

To His Excellency Ambrose E. Burnside, Governor of the State of Rhode Island, and Maj. Major-General in the army of the United States:

We, the undersigned, citizens of Rhode Island, have read with profound indignation the remarks of the Hon. WILLIAM SPRAGUE in the Senate of the United States, in which you and the officers and soldiers from this State under your command in the first battle of the war, have been most wantonly and maliciously assailed before the whole country. We feel that a great wrong has been done to you and to the brave men, both the living and the dead, who served with you in the army of the Republic; and also that the honor of Rhode Island has been deeply wounded, and the fair fame of the State foully traduced in the national Senate at Washington by one who is sworn bound to cherish and protect them. For the purpose, therefore, of rebuking these atrocious calumnies, and of renewing both to you and to those who served with you, the expression of our undiminished gratitude, confidence and respect, we hereby invite you to name a day, at your own convenience, on which you will meet us and others of your fellow-citizens at a public reception in the city of Providence.

Painful Accident to a Stage Driver.

From the Bangor (Me.) Whig, April 13.

Mr. GEORGE MCCURDY, one of the drivers on the air line route between this City and Calais, met with an accident on his way to this city, between 8 and 9 o'clock on Tuesday evening, which will probably result in his death. It seems that somewhere in the neighborhood of Wesley, some fifty miles east of here, he was in some manner thrown from his seat, and his foot getting caught in the coach, he was dragged some four miles, the horses running away until they came to the place where they changed horses, when the attention of the drivers was discovered. The marks were plainly visible where he had been dragged along the road, and his watch, valuables, were found scattered about as they had fallen from his pockets.

Barbara Frietchie Again.

A correspondent of the Washington Star says:

"I premise by saying that I am a native of Frederick City, and have known the FRITCHIE family all my lifetime, and that it is one of the most respectable of the entire community; and it has been a surprise to me that no one has ventured upon a vindication of her claims to the honor which the poet has given her. BARBARA FRITCHIE was a reality at the time represented. When JACKSON was passing through Frederick, of necessity he had to pass the house in which she lived, on West Patrick-street, south side, next to Carrol Creek. As he and his troops passed her house, she appeared at the dormer window of her cottage-like house and waved the Stars and Stripes before their veritable faces. One of his men raised his gun toward her, and she cried 'Shoot! shoot!' still waving her flag. JACKSON himself knocked his gun aside, and commanded him not to attempt any such thing, at the same time raising his hat in honor of the flag. A short time was spent up from his own men, and they passed on. This is the gist of the story which I have often heard in Frederick, and never heard it contradicted by anyone. Mrs. QUARTRELL's story may be true, but I never heard it before I saw it in your paper."

A Large Increase in Mission Work—Liberality of the Churches.

The year 1868 appropriately marks a new era in City evangelization. It was at that date the New-York City Mission commenced the work of reconstructing its machinery and adapting its system to the special necessities of the missionary field in New-York. Public meetings were held, articles were prepared for the Press, and various measures were inaugurated looking to aggressive movements in every direction. The business men of New-York were prompt to respond to the new calls made upon their time and money, and have liberally sustained all the onward movements. During these five years, from 1864 to 1869, thirty grand Public United meetings have been held, besides hundreds of smaller missionary and committee meetings, 369 articles prepared for the public prints, and thirteen reports and documents on the various interests of City missions have been published. Within the same period four benevolent citizens have given for the support of the missionaries $160,000 and upward, and for the erection of mission chapels more than $100,000. The new spirit infused into the City Mission Society, through its meetings and statements, was diffused abroad, and all kindred enterprises shared in the revived interest and activity. The Episcopal City Mission, the Methodist City Mission, and others, took steps immediately toward a new adjustment and enlargement of their plans, and have been greatly prospered. In a recent report it was stated that the Methodist City Mission had, in the last three years, raised and expended $126,000 in building four mission chapels. Within the same period the Brick Presbyterian, the Fifth-avenue Presbyterian and the Fourth-avenue Presbyterian Churches, have together raised an equal amount, which has been laid out in buying and building three mission chapels. The Holy Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church—comparatively a young church—has also built a mission chapel, and is sustaining four or five other missions besides. The Collegiate Reformed Church has lately erected a handsome chapel, to be known as the "Knox Memorial Chapel," on Ninth-avenue, near Thirty-eighth-street, and another mission chapel is established by the same church, will shortly be opened at Seventh-avenue and Fifty-fourth-street.

The Madison-square Presbyterian Church, the West Presbyterian Church, and the Eleventh Presbyterian Church, are raising money for the erection of new chapels for the missions under their care. The Wilson mission, which has grown out of one of the oldest and most successful of our industrial schools, has purchased a building on the corner of Avenue A and Eighth-street, where they will prepare neat and attractive accommodations for their increasing numbers. There are now 125 mission stations in this City where the preaching of the gospel, and Sabbath-schools and other religious and moral services for adults and for children are regularly carried on. Of this number 41 are permanently established in suitable, commodious, church-like buildings, with the ministry, the ordinances and the government that usually appertain to churches, though they are not regularly incorporated as such. Others of these mission stations will arise and build during the year. There are a million of dollars and more already invested in mission chapels and churches, and hundreds of thousands of dollars are annually raised for the support of City missionaries, missionary pastors, Bible readers, and for the maintenance of the mission work in its various branches. Lately a number of prominent gentlemen of the Methodist Episcopal Church initiated the noble enterprise of raising $600,000, to be expended, according to the published statements, in securing eligible sites and erecting chapels and churches, chiefly on the outskirts of the City, on the lines of the rapidly-extending population. This splendid example of church extension will no doubt be followed by the other religious denominations, and the various City missions will continue to push out their aggressive forces until the healthful influences of Christian philanthropy shall be felt in every district of our City, among all classes of our population.

The Colonization Fever—Another New Colony Formed, to Locate in Virginia.

It is a noteworthy fact that there is quite a fever among the laboring and mechanic classes of our City in the matter of colonization. Companies are being formed for the purpose of moving to the West and South, and settling on the rich public lands in the former, and on those lands in the latter which are now offered for sale at very reduced figures. Under the Homestead law, every citizen, or head of a family, is entitled to 160 acres of public land in the Western States or Territories, at a total cost of $18. In order that the expense of reaching these places may be reduced so as to be within the means of all who choose to profit by the inducement held out by Governments, and also that farming implements, &c., may be purchased at a cheaper rate than if the purchases were made by single individuals, colonies are formed, each member of which pays a small sum into a general fund, which payment entitles him to all the benefits to be derived from such association. The first detachment, consisting of twenty-five families, of the Excelsior Colony, the pioneer organization, has already started for Nebraska, under the leadership of Mr. LOUIS WALKER, its President, and will soon be followed by about fifty more families, who form the balance of the colony. A colony known as the Manhattan, has also been formed, and is rapidly augmenting in numbers. It proposes to locate in Georgia. An account of its operations was given in the TIMES of Thursday. Another colony to be called the Eureka, is also in process of formation. It already has about 200 members, and proposes to swell its number to 500 families. This colony will locate in Middle Virginia. About 12,000 acres of land have been selected there for this purpose, the soil being among the best in the State, and the owners have offered to sell it to the colonists at $4 per acre. No interest is asked on the amount of the purchase money, and the buyers are allowed to pay for the land by small monthly installments. Part of these lands are already cleared, and on the remainder there are very valuable timber cuttings. The country is well watered, affording ample facilities for the operation of saw-mills, grist-mills, &c. This colony proposes to set out about the middle of May next. The entrance fee demanded from such as become members of this organization is small, and if any one becomes dissatisfied with the manner in which its operations are conducted, he is entitled to have his money returned to him. Mr. PARKER, of Albany, a gentleman of wealth and respectability, has been made President of the colony, for the purpose of organizing it and putting it in practical operation, and is using his best efforts to forward its interests in every way. The gentlemen who have the lands to dispose of in Virginia are exceedingly anxious to have the settlers come among them. One of them announced that if these lands did not, on examination, bear out his description of them, he would willingly pay the expenses incurred by the colonists in going there, and give each head of a family $100 in addition thereto. The members of the Eureka organization appear to be very sanguine that their enterprise will be fruitful of success. Their meetings will be held regularly at the lecture room of the Whitlock Exposition Company, No. 97 Park-place. This room, it may be mentioned, is given free of charge, for meeting purposes, to persons who desire to form themselves into colonies. Several new organizations are contemplated, and it is estimated that 50,000 persons will leave the City, for homes in the South and West, during the coming Summer season.

The Brain-Crowders' Club.

This Club convened Thursday at their spacious hall, No. 37 Park-place, at 1:30 P. M., with T. B. WAKEMAN presiding. The meeting was composed of a respectable number of ladies and gentlemen from both the City and the rural districts. Mr. A. S. FULLER read a brief paper on "Horticultural Humbugs." He showed who are denounced as humbugs and why that appellation is given to any one. Horticulturists and pomologists, he said, here experimented extensively in bringing out new varieties, and in many instances they have not been able to succeed. Honest failures have been alluded to as malicious humbugs. He thought that there is really less fraud and deception in horticultural matters than in almost any other livelihood. One of the greatest humbugs in horticultural affairs is the practice of some nurserymen of stating in their catalogues that if they have not the varieties ordered they will forward others quite as good. This, he thought, was a humbug. Also, those peddlers, who canvass the entire country, selling trees and bushes are, as a class, notorious swindlers. And people who will purchase trees and bushes of them ought to be swindled.

An animated discussion followed the reading of Mr. FULLER's paper. Individuals related how they had been swindled by peddlers, who substituted inferior varieties for those the buyer desired to obtain.

Mr. A. BIRNEY was then introduced, who advocated the cultivation of grapes and other kinds of fruit in the back yards of city residences. He related his experience with grapevines in the lots of his tenant-houses in Jersey City, which, he said, would rent for $150 to $200 each more per annum, because there were productive grapevines in the backyards than the houses on either side of them where there are no vines. He maintained that a sufficient amount of grapes may be produced in cities to supply a large demand. He felt confident that most families can raise nearly enough grapes in their rear yards to supply their families for only a few dollars.

H. B. SMITH, during the discussion, stated that the peddlers had told him that they always sold the most popular varieties of fruit trees. If people called Baldwin trees, they secured Baldwin labels to them, and sold them for Baldwins, whatever the trees might be. And so of every other variety.

Mr. BIRNEY stated that he saw a Scuppernong grape-vine at the South that had spread over two acres of ground, and was very productive. Its branches spread out, they were staked down, and took root.

Mr. TROWBRIDGE, of New-Haven, related his manner of making an improved grape trellis, which cannot be described without the aid of an illustration.

Messrs. A. S. FULLER and W. S. CARPENTER stated that at the next meeting on Thursday, 22d inst., they will distribute, gratuitously, to persons desiring them, several thousand raspberry bushes, choice strawberry plants, and several hundred of the thornless Dorchester's Seedling raspberry. The President desired the reporters to state that the hall is free to any and all; and every one disposed to hear or to participate in the deliberations of the Club is invited to be present at 1:30 o'clock, and to make suggestions, relate his successes or failures in horticulture, ask questions, or to answer any inquiries that may be offered through the Club.

Recent Upon the Hat Trade—A Series of Forged Orders and Checks.

A young man, giving his name as CHARLES WILSON, was arraigned yesterday afternoon before Justice DODGE, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, upon a charge of forgery. The case was of genuine interest, as showing the daring of Metropolitan experts in crime, and the extreme disasters incurred from their schemes by New-York merchants. It appears that on the 31st day of March last a young man, appearing and claiming to be nothing more than a messenger, entered the store of MARTIN BATES, Jr., & Co., No. 18 Mercer-street, and presented to one of the clerks a sealed envelope directed to the firm. The envelope being opened was found to contain what purported to be an order from HURT & DUSENBURY, of No. 4 Astor House, for goods worth $600, and also the check of that firm for $600 as a partial payment on the goods. These documents were unbusiness-like in appearance, and no attempt had been made to even imitate the signature of the firm, but the clerk delivered the articles to the pseudo messenger, who departed in haste with his prize. The check being presented was declared to be forgery, and HURT & DUSENBURY declared the order likewise to be none of their handiwork; and MARTIN BATES, JR. & CO., found that they had been victimized to the amount of $600. They immediately notified the trade of this last prank of crime, and hatters generally throughout the City were put on the alert for a repetition of the offence. In due time the ruse was again tried, ROBERT CUSHMAN, of No. 54 Mercer-street, being the selected victim, but although a forged order and check were presented, his house was content with refusing to honor either. He did not attempt to have the criminal arrested. Yesterday, the young man again made his appearance, and on this occasion entered the store of FROST & DAVENPORT, No. 454 Broome-street, presented the order of H. M. GRAVES, of No. 43 Mercer-street, for goods worth $200, accompanied by a check for $75, drawn on the National Shoe and Leather Bank. On this occasion the operator came at last to grief, for doubt being expressed as to the genuineness of the order and check he left the store, and, being pursued, he started off on a full run, but was captured after a short chase. Subsequent inquiries proved that in this case, as in all the others, forgery had been cunningly concocted, as no attempt had been made to imitate the writing of Mr. GRAVES, nor had the check been drawn upon the bank where he has an account. They had, however, by some means, obtained the letter-head of Mr. GRAVES, which had only been printed last Saturday, and the order had been written upon it.

The prisoner, upon being arraigned before the Magistrate, declared that he was innocent of any intention to defraud, and claimed that the envelope had been given to him sealed, as he presented it at the corner of Elm and Canal streets, by a man whom he did not know, and who was to pay him for delivering the envelope at its address. A formal complaint, however, being made against WILSON, he was committed in default of $1,500 for his appearance at the General Sessions. It is believed that WILSON himself has been nothing more than an instrument used by the forgers in their despoiling scheme, and that the real culprits have not yet been unmasked.

Eulogy of the Late Dr. Ambler.

Dr. J. G. AMBLER Wednesday evening delivered a eulogy on his uncle, Dr. D. C. AMBLER, of Florida, in the small chapel of the University, at the request of the College of Dental Surgeons. The speaker commenced by urging that there was need among dentists of a feeling of brotherhood expressing itself in acts of sympathy among the living and in suitable remembrance of the dead. Then speaking of Dr. AMBLER, he said that he was born in the year 1800, a descendant of a family which came to Massachusetts very soon after the Mayflower. In 1821 he was a favorite student in the office of Dr. VALENTINE MOTT, and graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Afterward forming the acquaintance of Dr. Rogers, he concluded to take up dentistry. He practiced for a while in the South and then went to Paris, and there created and established the reputation of American dentists. In 1839 he returned to New-York, and commenced practice here. At that time artificial teeth were made of ivory; then gold plates were used, and teeth from the French hospitals were brought imported into this country, and found their way into the mouths of the best society. Mineral teeth were manufactured in France, but they were very inferior imitations of natural teeth. The first really good mineral teeth were invented and manufactured by Dr. AMBLER, after years of years of experiments. He was also the first to use atmospheric pressure to hold metallic plates in the mouth. He was one of the first to seek to substitute cotton-seed oil for the turnkey, that instrument of torture, which happily banished by Dr. CHEVALIER. At one of the first Fairs of the American Institute he exhibited some of his handiwork, and received a gold medal. In 1855 he became interested in a large plantation in Florida, on cotton seeds, and lost all his money in the failure of that experiment. He then returned to dentistry. In 1858 he presided at a meeting in New-York, which was the commencement of the College of Dental Surgeons. Moving to Florida, and adopting that State as his home, he devoted himself, up to the time of his death, to the advancement of manufacturing and agricultural interests in that region. The speaker read a quotation from the Florida Times, a warm tribute of respect and acknowledgment of indebtedness for his disinterested labors, and closed with a short poem.

It was voted to ask Dr. AMBLER to furnish a copy of the eulogy to be printed.

Dr. FITCH, who had been a personal friend of the deceased, added a few words, speaking expressively of his kindness for and his proficiency in agricultural chemistry.

The meeting was presided over by Dr. BUERGER.

The Wicks-Fitch Billiard Contest—A Match Between Deery and Foster—Retirement of Dion, &c., &c.

It was commonly believed two months ago, when the match for $1,000, French caroms, 300 points up, was made between FRANK FITCH, of Troy, and WILLIAM WICKS, of Brooklyn, that the latter was the more skillful player. This idea was, however, effectually dispelled on Wednesday night, when the contest took place. FITCH obtained a commanding lead at the outset, gradually increased it, never once lost it, and won by 75, averaging two and one-eighteenth. The four best runs were 19 and 14 by FITCH, and 13 and 11 by WICKS. The articles of agreement limited the number of spectators to seventy. Nearly all the prominent Billiardists of the Metropolis were among the favored few, and therefore the audience was, if not large, most critical.

At the close of the game a match was made between JOHN DEERY and MERVINE FOSTER. This match had been anticipated for two weeks. Both men were anxious to make it, and at their first meeting, there being no cavilling as to terms, it was consummated. They are to play at French caroms, the same game as that at which FOSTER defeated DERRY in Boston, 1867, 600 points up. The contest will take place at O'CONNOR's tonight.

A letter from JOSEPH DION to MICHAEL PERRAN, requests the latter gentleman to announce that it is his intention to play no more matches, and that in future he will not notice challenges of any sort. In explaining this proceeding, unusual in a billiard-player of his years, Mr. DION says that the demands of his business (that of a billiard-cloth manufacturer) will not admit of sparing time sufficient for practice.

This City, which within the past fourteen months has lost MCDEVITT, RUDOLPHE, and GARNIER, is about to be deprived of another fine player, MELVIN FOSTER, intends to take up his residence in New-Orleans. Next week and on Wednesday or Thursday next, will open a handsome room there, with seven tables furnished by PHELAN & COLLENDER.

A match has been made between MAURICE DALLINY and WILLIAM (GOLDEN WAIT) for $150 a side, leaving it at the option of GOLDENWAIT to increase the stake to $500 a side. They now play the four-ball carom game, 1,200 points, push shot barred. Time to be named Saturday afternoon.

Velocipede Matters.

Another exciting series of bycicle races took place at the Apollo Rooms, Thursday night, and again the hall was crowded with a very fashionable assemblage of spectators, the ladies especially manifesting quite a degree of interest in the contests which took place. The feature of the proceedings was the races against time, for a prize valued at $250, the prize consisting of a handsome silver-mounted Pickering velocipede. The first part of the programme included some display of fancy riding, the feature of it being the graceful evolutions of Miss FRANKLIN on a "pocrian" machine, and the fine display by Mr. CARPENTER.

"For the races, there were nine entries, and after an hour's trial, in which a number of mishaps in the way of falls occurred, one of the amateur pupils of the school bore off the prize. The distance ridden was ten circuits of the course, half a mile, and the best time made was by Mr. BROOKS, in 1:27¼. DARLING being second in 1:28¼. BROOKS rode a forty-inch Wood machine, and DARLING a forty-inch Demarest. Afterward, Messrs. PICKERING and DEMAREST tried to beat Mr. BROOKS' time on their respective machines, but both failed. To-night a series of races, open to all comers, takes place at the Jersey City velocipedrome.

Second-avenue Railroad Strike.

The strike of the drivers on the Second-avenue Railroad remained yesterday without prospect of a compromise with the Company. The strikers are supported by subscriptions of conductors and drivers on other lines, and by contributions from various trades unions. The plasterers, among others, have voted a subscription of $2 a week from each member of their Union for the purpose. It is thought that if a railroad line cannot pay its way without adding to the labor of men who have already worked fourteen hours daily, it had better cease running altogether. The fact that these men have been compelled hitherto to work fourteen hours for their pittance of $2, is calling the attention of the various workingmen's unions to the similar condition of the employes on all city railroad lines. They all work fourteen hours in the twenty-four with exception of the men on the Third-avenue line, who are required to work only thirteen hours. No other laboring men or mechanics work more than ten hours, and many but eight. It is asked, therefore, why car-drivers and conductors should be an exception to the rule. Two cars, only, upon the Second-avenue line, ran yesterday, and those made but one trip. They started in the morning with new drivers, who relinquished their work on returning, not wishing to obstruct the old drivers in gaining their end. The rails in the depot are undergoing repairs, and the cars stand idle in long lines upon Second-avenue and Sixty-third-street.

Labor Movements.

Public attention has been called to the fact that laborers in the Central Park and on the new Boulevard are working ten hours a day, in despite of the eight hour law of the State. It is urged that the City should set an example in carrying out a law thought to be salutary to the physical well being and mental development of the masses, and that employers generally would then be more willing to abide by its provisions.

Brooklyn Industrial School.

From the last annual report of the Brooklyn Industrial School Association and Home for Destitute Children, it appears that the receipts during the past year amounted to $19,920 54, and that after all expenditures there is a balance on hand amounting to $6,726 95. The attendance at the several schools had been 630; there had been distributed 643 garments, 193 pairs of shoes, and 12,000 meals. At the Home 160 children had been accommodated, 23 of whom were sent into the country. The ladies connected with this Society constitute a noble galaxy of colaborers in their work of benevolence.

LAW REPORTS.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—SOUTHERN DISTRICT.

INTERESTING CUSTOM-HOUSE CASE—FRAUDS IN A BONDED WAREHOUSE—CONFROMISES—RIGHTS OF INFORMERS.

In the matter of the petitions of E. D. Webster et al., D. H. Burnett et al. and the United States, for a distribution of $20,722 in gold and $22,000 in currency, paid into the registry on the 27th day of December, 1866.—This is a controversy between the Customs officers and certain informers on the one hand, and the United States on the other; and also, between the informers among themselves in regard to the distribution of a certain fund which originally consisted of $20,722 in gold and $22,000 in currency, of which was paid into the registry of this Court under the following circumstances: In the Summer of 1867 the officers of the Customs having discovered that great frauds upon the Government had been perpetrated by persons doing business in this City under the name of J. W. George & Co., by means of the unlawful withdrawal, without payment of duties, of dutiable merchandise from the bonded warehouse Nos. 280 and 281 West-street, criminal proceedings were instituted against the offenders, in which several of them were arrested and held to bail for trial, and a civil action for duties, amounting to $400,000, was commenced in the District Court against one of them, named Henry Hart, in which suit a large amount of real estate and personal property was attached; a quantity of cigars, appraised at some $25,000, was also seized by the Collector, as forfeited by reason of these frauds. Pressed by these proceedings, the offenders commenced negotiations with the officers of the Government, which terminated in an agreement made at Washington with the Secretary of the Treasury, by which it was arranged that the offenders should pay to the United States the sum of $20,722 in gold for the duties on the cigars, brandy, rum, gin and wine withdrawn by them without payment of the duty, and also $22,000 in currency as penalties for illegal abstraction of such bonded merchandise; and upon such payment, the Government was to discharge all the property which had been attached or seized, and release the offenders from all civil and criminal liabilities relating to the illegal transactions. Accordingly, instructions were issued to the District-Attorney to carry into effect the arrangement, and the offenders proceeded to make the payment agreed on. This payment, however, by arrangement with the District-Attorney, was not made in the action for duties which was pending in the District Court, but a new, and in some sense a friendly, action of debt was commenced in the Circuit Court, not for duties, but for penalties and forfeitures, amounting to the sum agreed on, namely, $20,722 in gold and $22,000 in currency, in which action judgment was confessed on the same day, and the parties satisfied on the payment, into the registry of the Circuit Court, of the sums demanded. At the same time the property in the action pending in the District Court was released from custody, and the criminal proceedings stopped. The cigars held under seizure by the Collector were also directed to be released on the payment of the duties due to the Collector. There being thus $20,722 in gold, and $22,000 in currency in the registry of the Court, a controversy arose respecting the rights of the Customs officers and the informers, in this fund, it being claimed by the officers and informers that no part of it was duties, but that it was all penalties and forfeitures, and as such was distributable one-half to the Government, one-fourth to the Informers, and one-fourth to the informers. A controversy also arose between the parties claiming to be the informers, in regard to their respective rights. One-half of the amount of the consideration money thus paid over to the United States, has been so paid for compromise, and one-half the residue of the controversy is admitted to be payable to the Collector, has also been paid for compromise, thus leaving in the registry $20,361 in gold and $8,000 in currency. To one-half of this $20,361 the Custom-house officers claim, as the informers claim the other half, as well as the balance of the currency. These respective claims have been set forth by petitions, under which, by order of Court, testimony in behalf of all parties has been taken by the Clerk, upon which petitions, and some 363 pages of testimony, with a mass of exhibits, the case now comes before the Court for its determination.

BREWSTER, J.—The course of procedure adopted in this proceeding appears to me somewhat irregular. A more formal proceeding would have been for the Customs officers and informers to have set forth their claims to this fund by petitions to which answers should have been interposed by the Government, and upon the issues thus framed and the testimony adduced by the respective parties in support of their allegations a decree could have been rendered with less danger of confusion and mistake. The respective parties petitioning here seem to have treated each petition as an answer to the others, and the Custom-house officers appear to have considered themselves entitled to prove their case under the petition presented by the United States. But as all parties have spread out their case very fully on the evidence, and as all the points in controversy have been considered and argued by the counsel without objection, as if duly pleaded, it appears unnecessary to direct the proceedings to be reformed. In considering the questions thus raised it will be convenient to examine first the claim made by the Customs officers and informers to that portion of the fund consisting of $20,361 in gold. The claim in regard to this is that the $20,722 in gold, of which the $20,361 remaining in the registry is a moiety, consisted of fines and penalties, and that a moiety of it is given by law to the Customs officers and informers, while on the part of the United States it is contended that the $20,722 was not fines and penalties, but duties, of which no person is entitled to share with the Government.

The determination of this issue renders it necessary to examine the evidence in the record of a judgment in favor of the United States against the offenders, which was entered on the 27th day of December, and was satisfied upon the payment of this $20,722 in gold, and the $22,000 in currency, and of the delivery of the fund, as has been suggested on this argument, it is not easy to see how either the informers or the Government have any right to any portion of the fund. The will cannot be taken in defiance of the record itself. The cause of action which the record sets forth, and which was admitted by the parties, was this: That certain parties defendants unlawfully removed from a bonded warehouse certain goods without payment of the duties, whereby, as it is averred, the value of the goods became forfeited to the United States, whereupon the United States became entitled to have of the defendants $20,722 in gold and $22,000 in currency.

The record nowhere refers to any statute by virtue of which the alleged forfeiture of goods gave a right of action to the United States which fixed the value of goods for any such sum as is set forth in the declaration, or which upon the facts stated in the declaration, gave a right to the United States to recover such sum to pay to the United States this $20,722 in gold and $22,000 in currency.

Now, if informers can only claim a share in fines, penalties and forfeitures which are created by some law of the United States. If no statute exists by virtue of which any particular sum of money, whether called a fine, penalty or forfeiture, has been demanded and paid, no Custom-house officer or informer can share in the money.

Here was no forfeiture of goods, for no goods subject to forfeiture were seized, and no such sum of money which was seized by the Collector was released without any other condition than that they be duly entered, the duties paid, and the illegal act done away with. It is not the fact that the parties liable in a civil action, under any law of the United States, to such fines and penalties as were demanded, paid the money, but the Collector, in currency, which formed part of the demand, can be held to be thirty-two thousand dollars, and that portion of the fund has been so treated by the Government, and the balance, $20,361 in gold which is now under consideration, is in fact, the record alone were to be looked to as fixing the rights of the parties, it would, at least, be a question of very great doubt whether the informers have any right upon the Government to share of the gold in the registry. That difficulty has been felt, and accordingly the Government offered, and the Claimants have not, in this proceeding, insisted on a judgment of this Court, upon judgment alone, but have introduced much testimony to show the real nature of the claims made by the Government and the transactions which resulted in the payment of the fund in question.

The testimony introduced by the Government has been also introduced by the United States, tending to show the circumstances under which this money was demanded and paid. It is upon this evidence, therefore, that we must decide the legal liabilities which the parties who paid this money were under to the United States, and from which they were released by the payment, that the claim of the fund is to be determined and the rights of the parties to share in it. It is, of course, a fact, that if the course of this proceeding had been otherwise, and the judgment entered on the 27th of December, and the fund paid upon an execution of the executed of the defendants, the money would have been paid to the Government upon the Court, called in its aid by the proceeding, to distribute a fund in its hands, and the Court would have found that the fund was paid over to the Government under which that judgment was taken. Upon this agreement as an equitable transaction, and perhaps properly so treated, but it is such an agreement as to require full explanation before I should feel justified in distributing this large amount of money in accordance with its terms.

Looking, then, into the evidence as it has been given, it appears that certain parties, doing business under the firm of J. W. George & Co., perpetrated frauds upon the Government of the revenue, by withdrawing dutiable goods from a bond for consumption without payment of the duties, that proceedings were commenced against them, and that, as a civil proceeding, to recover some $400,000 of duties, in which suit a large amount of property was attached, and subsequently the cigars, appraised by the Secretary of the Treasury for relief, and seized, were delivered and deliberately admitted themselves to be liable to the Government for duties amounting to $42,722 in gold, which they tendered to pay, together with the sum of $22,000 in currency, as a penalty for so many unlawful withdrawals, and that they also admitted to have been committed by them, and thereupon the Secretary agreed that all the parties implicated should be released from all civil and criminal liability relating to the transactions in which they had been engaged upon the payment of such duties and penalties. Instructions were accordingly issued to the District-Attorney to receive the money and stop the proceedings.

In pursuance of this agreement the parties did pay into the registry of this Court the $20,722 in gold, and the $22,000 in currency, and all the pending civil and criminal proceedings were thereupon stopped by the District-Attorney; but the payment, instead of being made in the proceedings pending at the time of the agreement with the Secretary, was made in a motion of a judgment contained by them in a friendly action which they suggested should be commenced as affording them a more satisfactory evidence of the payment of the money which they had agreed with the Secretary to pay.

This agreement with the Secretary of the Treasury has been treated, on the part of the Government, as to have been a compromise made by him under the act of March 4, 1863, section 10, (12 Stat., 740,) and therefore decisive of the character of the fund realized in pursuance of it; but it is not such. The extraordinary power which the interests of the Government, require to be exercised by the Secretary of the Treasury, is well as that of the Government. The statute therefore confines the power to the compromising of claims in favor of the United States, and contains no power of the kind in regard to criminal prosecution. It looks also to the officer in charge of the claim on behalf of the Government as the proper place of origin for proposals of compromise, and requires the Secretary to confer no power in regard to claims not in suit, and prescribes as the basis, and the only legal basis of action on the part of the Secretary, a report of the attorney, showing in detail the conditions of the case and the terms of compromise proposed, and also showing the approval of the terms by the attorney. It also requires in addition that the opinion of the Treasury should recommend the acceptance of the terms. These it will be seen that the proceedings, the official to the terms of compromise which it is proposed to accept is required to make it effective. Further the compromise with the Secretary is confined to the acceptance or rejection of the terms recommended by the attorney. Here the terms agreed to by the District-Attorney were never reported or recommended by the District-Attorney, and the terms of the report must the Attorney had to be without authority of law and of no effect as a legal compromise. The proceeding which it has been claimed that the Government meant that the payment of the money should be in lieu of any terms requiring a less sum than that actually agreed on by the Secretary, and upon his own official responsibility, in adjusting terms of compromise, is, I think, a good illustration of the result of any other than a strict adherence to the provisions of the law. For it seems, as I understand the matter, that the terms agreed on by the Secretary, the Government apparently was favorable to the officers then likely to recommended by the District-Attorney, were, in fact, more than double, and the sum realized was several thousands of dollars less than the parties themselves had offered to the District-Attorney. While considering the action of the Secretary, however, in the compromise, I feel bound to notice another prominent feature in this case. The Secretary undertook to compromise the criminal proceedings which were pending in Court. Neither the act of March 4, 1863, nor any other act that I know of, confers that power upon the Secretary of the Treasury. The Solicitor of the Treasury may perhaps have power in a proper case, and upon his own official responsibility, to direct the District-Attorney to effect a discontinuance of a criminal prosecution, but I know of no statute which permits either the Secret

FRIDAY, April 16—P. M.

After a prolonged season, of four weeks, of dear Money and extra commissions paid by the Brokers, the market was to-day fairly reëstablished on the basis of 7 ₱ cent. ₱ annum, Currency, free of commission. This change was partially indicated yesterday, but was not made generally felt until after 1 o'clock to-day. One of the consequences already notable is the freedom with which speculation at the Stock Exchange takes hold of one Stock after another in rapid succession, to advance prices already in many instances deemed strong, and the facility with which large amounts of the Public Funds and of the Railways are marketed on each rise. The movement is also participated in by the Southern State Bonds, and by three or four of the Miscellaneous Stocks, like Pacific Mail, Canton Company, Mariposa, &c. There was an increased business, well distributed over the active list, at all the Boards to-day. The 5-20s of 1867 sold up to 115@115⅞; the 1865s to 120⅝@121, and the other descriptions in proportion; 106 ₱ cent. being paid for the 5 ₱ cents 10-40s. The prospect at the late Government Board of the Stock Exchange seemed to point to higher figures, for the July and January 5-20s especially, early next week, if not to-morrow. There is not a very large stock of these Bonds on the Street outside the recent heavy buyers who are understood to be connected with two or three of the great London and Frankfort lines.

The Gold sales also advanced in amount and price to-day, and the impression prevailed that the same Bull clique in the Gold Room who carried the Cash Gold last Saturday are preparing the market for another demonstration of the sort. Gold for delivery was not made scarce to-day, but the sellers short against the upward turn have no assurance as to how soon or how late the screw may be suddenly applied. The official notice of the Secretary of the Treasury, that he is ready to prepay his July as well as May Gold Interest, is construed as an intimation that he will make no other disposition of his surplus until this experiment is fairly tried, and fails of its purpose, as we fear it will do. The sales ran up from 132⅛ to 132¾ ₱ cent., and the market, up to 4 o'clock, maintained the advance. Exchange on London was in good request at 107⅞@108 ₱ cent., standard names, early in the day, but the rise in Gold had the tendency, later in the day, to check business somewhat for the steamer sailing to-morrow.

In the Railway markets, as noticed above, the dealings were large and quite general in all the New-York Roads, (except Erie, which has no standing at the Old or Open Boards,) and in the Western Roads. Among the former, Harlem advanced to 141 ₱ cent.; Hudson River was active, but the price fluctuated, and New-York Central fluctuated between 144@144⅝ ₱ cent. On the Western lines there was a further rise in Michigan Southern, Toledo and Wabash and St. Paul's; a recovery in Northwest, and continued firmness in Fort Wayne and Rock Island. Reading also participated in the rise.

There was increased inquiry for the Southern State Bonds, and prices were firmer than yesterday. In Pacific Mail sales were carried up to 29 ₱ cent., in Canton to 44 ₱ cent., and in Mariposa Preferred to 30.

The Treasury Office received $405,000 for Customs to-day, and prepaid $401,000 May Coupons.

After the late Boards broke up the following quotations were made as compared with Thursday night:

The Columbus, Chicago and Indiana Central Company have placed their Transfer Books in New-York with the Union Trust Company, and the Registration of their Certificates with the St. Nicholas National Bank.

The National City Bank, Mr. M. TAYLOR, President, to-day declared a half-yearly Dividend of Ten ₱ Cent. The Pacific National has declared an extra Dividend of five ₱ cent.

We have been requested to call the attention of the holders of the New-Haven and Northampton Company's Bonds to a notice from the Treasurer, in the advertising columns this morning.

Collector GRINNELL has received the following letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, postponing the operation of the recent regulations requiring all lines carrying dutiable goods to be bonded for that purpose:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 14, 1869.

SIR: Your letter of the 13th inst., relative to the regulations for bonding railroads and other transportation companies, dated Feb. 4, 1869, has been this day received. In view of your statements to the effect that an immediate enforcement of these regulations would cause serious interruption to the business of your port, I have determined to postpone their enforcement until the 1st day of July, 1869.

In the meantime it is expected that all transportation companies affected by these regulations will make prompt application to bond their respective routes, as those failing to do so will be positively prohibited from importing merchandise in bond after the expiration of the period named.

Very respectfully,

GEO. S. BOUTWELL, Secretary.

Internal Revenue Decision.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
WASHINGTON, March 31, 1869.

SIR: ROBERT DENNY, of Indianapolis, has under date of the 20th inst. written this office, asking whether payment of a lawyer's license covers the business of claim agents.

You are instructed that every person who does the business of claim agent, is liable to the special tax imposed, under the provisions of paragraph 21, section 79, of the compilation of law relating to internal revenue, without reference to the fact that the person may also pay the tax of a lawyer.

Very respectfully,

J. W. DOUGLASS, Deputy Commissioner.

DAVID BRADER, Assessor, Indianapolis.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

HOWES & MACY, BANKERS,
(Formerly officers of the Park Bank,)
30 Wall Street, N. Y.
FOUR PER CENT. INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.

The business of this house is the same as an Incorporated Bank.

Persons keeping accounts may deposit and draw as they please, the same as with the City Banks, and will be allowed interest on their daily balances at 4 per cent.

Collections made on any part of the United States or Canada.

Orders for the purchase or sale of the various issues of Government and other Stocks, Bonds, and Gold, promptly executed for the usual commission.

THE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS OF the Rockford, Rock Island and St. Louis Railroad Company pay both the Principal and Seven per Cent. Interest—1st February and 1st August—in GOLD COIN, Free of Government Tax.

A limited amount only of these Bonds may be had, at par and accrued interest in currency, of H. H. BOODY, Treasurer, No. 12 Wall-st., or of HENRY CLEWS & CO., Bankers, No. 32 Wall-st.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

SAFES TO LET BY THE NATIONAL PARK BANK IN A BURGLAR AND FIRE-PROOF VAULT.—For the safe-keeping and protection from fire and burglars of Securities of all kinds, including Stocks, Bonds, Mortgages, Wills and Diamonds, and valuable Jewelry of every description. An inspection of the vault, constructed by this Bank in their new building, will at once convince all parties interested that the most perfect attainable security has been reached, and at an extremely moderate annual cost to each tenant.

The officers will take pleasure in showing the vault on application.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

Last night, in the House of Commons, Mr. GLADSTONE moved that the House go into Committee for the consideration of the bill for the establishment of the Irish Church. A motion to postpone its consideration for six months was made and led to an exciting debate. Mr. R. S. AYTOUN, a Liberal member from Kirkaldy, created an uproarious sensation by denouncing that clause of the bill which provides for the support of Maynooth College. His speech was greeted by cheers and counter cheers, and other demonstrations of great excitement. The discussion lasted six hours. Mr. GLADSTONE finally announced that the Government would exercise great care in endeavoring to make the provision for the College acceptable. Mr. DISRAELI followed in favor of going into Committee. A division was taken on that motion, resulting, yeas 368, nays 229, so the bill now goes into Committee.

A bill for the reorganization of the army has been introduced to the Italian Parliament. It fixes its minimum strength at 400,000 men.

CUBA.

Captain-General DULCE has issued a proclamation confiscating the property of certain Cubans for having, while in New-York, solicited contributions to aid the insurgents. ADELCHEN, a rebel leader, has been captured and summarily executed. A schooner loaded with arms was recently captured by Spanish vessels while trying to run the blockade established at the mouth of the Maulva River.

UNITED STATES SENATE.

At the opening of the extra session of the Senate, yesterday, the Chaplain prayed for the elevation of the colored race, yesterday being the anniversary of their emancipation, in honor of which there was a celebration in Washington. Mr. WILSON introduced a resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy, with the consent of the Government of Colombia, to cause a thorough survey to be made for a ship railway or a ship canal across the Isthmus of Darien, from San Miguel to the Gulf of Uraba, in Darien. The Senate then went into Executive Session.

GENERAL.

No cable dispatches were received from Europe yesterday until a late hour. The annual display of the previous night had interrupted communication somewhat through the American land wires, but the failure on the part of the cable is not accounted for. It will be seen, on reference to our columns of telegrams, that telegraphic communication with Europe has been restored.

Governor HOFFMAN yesterday sent a message to the State Senate vetoing the bill granting State aid to the Plattsburg and Whitehall Railroad. He claims that under the Constitution the bill should be submitted to the people for ratification, and thinks it a swindle in all its details.

DAVID DORE and JOSEPHINE LA FLAMME, who have been on trial three days at Worcester, Mass., charged with the murder of the husband of the woman, were yesterday acquitted. The jury was out three hours and a half.

The Republican members of the Legislature met in caucus at Albany, last evening, for the purpose of choosing a successor to Police Commissioner THOMAS ACTON, who has resigned on account of the state of his health. Supervisor HENRY SMITH, of this City, was chosen on the first ballot. Resolutions complimenting Mr. ACTON upon the ability, energy and zeal he had displayed during his term of office were adopted, and the caucus adjourned.

PATRICK BUCKLEY, one of the prisoners charged with being accessory to the murder of D'ARCY MCGEE, was brought to trial yesterday, and there being no evidence against him he was discharged. It is thought that the others who are similarly charged will speedily be released.

An old Indian burying-ground has been broken in upon by some workmen in St. Louis, while removing a mound in the outskirts of the city. A large number of bones and relics were found.

IRA I. BATCHELDER, of Maine, a member of the Portland Packing Company, died suddenly in Baltimore on Thursday morning.

On Wednesday the Legislature of Illinois paid a visit to the tomb of the late President LINCOLN, that day being the anniversary of his assassination. Liberal subscriptions were made to the Lincoln Monument Fund.

The Massachusetts Legislature has refused to sanction the opening of the public libraries on Sundays. It has, however, passed a bill forbidding the issuing of liquor licenses after the close of this month.

A man named WILLIAM HURLBURT, of Cornwall, Vt., reputed to be worth $8,000, recently starved himself to death because somebody robbed him of $130. He feared he would come to want, and so refused food until he died.

An attempt was made on Wednesday night to destroy a railroad bridge over the Erie Canal at Utica. An inflammable internal machine was attached to it, and but for the timely discovery of the fire the bridge would have been destroyed.

On Monday last a man named PILE shot and instantly killed Mr. CHAS. SMITH, a druggist, in the streets of Kansas City, Mo. Mr. SMITH had challenged PILE to descend from his wagon and fight, and while PILE was endeavoring to do so SMITH drew a revolver, whereupon PILE killed SMITH with a shot gun.

The Wilberforce University, situated in Green County, Ohio, near Xenia, was burned down some time ago. It is the only University founded and owned by colored men, and has already done a good work in preparing many young men and women as teachers. Mr. JOHN COUSINS, President of the Board of Trustees, is now in town soliciting subscriptions for the rebuilding of the University. His credentials are indorsed by General GRANT, Chief Justice CHASE, General HOWARD and others. Mr. COUSINS' headquarters are at No. 549 Broome-street.

The Pennsylvania Legislature adjourned yesterday.

The brig H. B. Celoce was seized by a Revenue Collector at New Orleans yesterday for an alleged attempt to evade the Revenue laws. At the investigation the Captain admitted that he had intended to defraud the insurance companies, he having arranged to take the vessel to sea and destroy her, for which "foul play" he was to receive $6,000.

DAVID H. CARPENTER, who killed his brother on the 28th of September last, was hanged at Angelica, N. Y., yesterday.

A very earnest and enthusiastic mass meeting of the National Workingmen's Union was held last night at the Cooper Institute, to sympathize with the painters in their strike to maintain the rule of eight hours as a day's work. Resolutions were passed strongly denouncing the late action of Secretaries BOREE and RAWLINS in reducing the pay of the eight-hour men in Government employ.

The inquiry with regard to the frauds in the possession of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, instituted at the suit of WM. M. TWEED, Jr., was continued before A. A. REDFIELD, Referee yesterday. The examination of HENRY C. CRAIG was resumed, and occupied the entire session.

The strike of the Second-avenue Railroad drivers remains in statu quo. But four cars were running yesterday.

THOMAS BRENNAN, indicted with the notorious scoundrel better known as "Reddy the Blacksmith," for robbing a countryman of $600, was tried at the Court of General Sessions yesterday and was sentenced to fifteen years in the State Prison. "Reddy" is promised the same sentence when convicted.

The spirit-photograph case was up before Justice DOWLING yesterday. The defendants' counsel declared their ability to prove the genuineness of the spirit photographs. No evidence was taken yesterday. The case was adjourned to the 21st inst.

Cotton was quiet, but steady, yesterday. Breadstuffs, Pork and Lard were less firm, and in limited request. A moderate inquiry prevailed for Groceries, Petroleum and Resins. Freights were quiet and rates were quoted easier.

The Democracy and the Unreconstructed States.

A dispatch from New-York to the St. Louis Republican announces that prominent Democrats here unite in the view of Mr. PENDLETON, that the people of the States affected by the new Reconstruction act should not in any manner contribute to its success. The same general idea was propounded some time since by Mr. PENDLETON. He would have the white population of the South refuse absolutely to recognize the altered relation of the negro in respect of political rights, in order that they may more consistently revive the fight against reconstruction in the next Presidential campaign. So now he prefers that Virginia, Mississippi and Texas shall remain out in the cold for an indefinite period, rather than by any action to make themselves parties to reconstruction. And Democratic leaders of this city echo his recommendation. Staunch as is the democracy of the Republican, it snubs these busybodies and quietly extinguishes the plan they propose:

"Theoretically, we have no doubt the people of those States believe with Mr. PENDLETON and the 'prominent New-York Democrats.' It was an adhesion to theory which brought about the late war. The theory was not sustained in the issue of arms. It is now a question of practical utility with those people as to what they will do. It is a question which involves social order, material development. It is a practical question, and it seems to us that the people of those States, who are vitally interested in the treatment of the question by how them, ought to be permitted to determine their own action without interference from outside parties. The theory of government is perhaps as well understood by the people of Virginia, Mississippi and Texas as it is by Democrats elsewhere, and, as they are more immediately interested in the practical results of the determination to which they may arrive in the premises, it appears reasonable that they should be left free to make their own choice."

The game which the Northern Democrats propose to play is well understood by the Southern people. They have no longer any disposition to burn their fingers in a vain attempt to pull chestnuts out of the fire, for the special benefit of Mr. PENDLETON and his friends. The experiment has been tried once too often. Nor have more abstractions the slightest charm for the white population of States whose every interest suffers from continued exclusion from the Union. They know that restoration is the condition-precedent of the renewed prosperity for which they yearn. They know that before the current of immigration can set in with full force, or industry resume its wonted energy, the condition of uncertainty which has been cruelly prolonged, must end. These and similar practical considerations will outweigh any theoretical or partisan arguments which demagogues may use. The question as they see it is, not how the ulterior purposes of the Pendleton Party may be best promoted, but how the material advantages consequent upon reconstruction may be most quickly secured.

There were serious difficulties in the way so long as the alternative presented to Virginia, Mississippi and Texas was the unqualified acceptance or the unqualified rejection of the Constitution prepared by the Conventions respectively. The Virginia instrument is so marred by harsh penalties and proscriptive provisions, that, as between its ratification entire, and the continuance of military rule, the odds really seemed in favor of the latter. The same may be said, with more or less modification, of the Mississippi and Texas Constitutions. The path has, however, been cleared by the message of General GRANT and the subsequent action of Congress. Much, of course, depends upon the precise form in which the President submits the question to the voters. To make ratification certain, it will be necessary for him to subject to a separate vote the obnoxious clauses of the Constitutions—those, we mean, which relate to test oaths, disfranchisement, disabilities and other symbols of hate and persecution. These clauses are in no degree essential to the fullest assertion of all that is implied by reconstruction. They are at once extraneous and offensive. That the President so considers them, may be inferred from the fact that the separate submission which the new act provides for, is a result of his own suggestion. The same sagacity and good feeling which dictated the proposition to Congress, may be relied upon to afford to the people most concerned, an opportunity of passing separate judgments upon the Constitutions proper and the obnoxious provisions which have been tacked to them.

On this basis we do not doubt that the States whose peace and prosperity violent Democrats would sacrifice to an exploded theory will quietly and favorably determine the issues before them. The Virginians, as far as we can judge, are preparing to turn to practical account the provisions of the new law, and enough is known of public opinion in Mississippi and Texas to make it reasonably certain that their citizens will follow the example. The opportunity they have coveted is before them. The manner of submitting the new constitutions for which they prayed awaits only the approval of the President.

The World, however, labors to convey an impression that, unless the constitutions are swallowed whole, Congress will withhold the sanction which is required to complete the work.

"Will Congress approve the defeat of the so-called constitutions in whole or in part, or the election of a Conservative Governor, or of a Legislature that will not ratify the negro-equality amendment, or of Democratic Representatives, United States Senators, or State officers? We trow not. He who thinks so is willfully blind to the temper and stupidly ignorant of the record of that body."

The allegation is that the rejection of the disability or test-oath clauses, if submitted separately, will be followed by a refusal on the part of Congress to accept the Constitution without them. A single fact should dispel apprehensions on this head. Congress has approved constitutions in which clauses of this character have no place. The Constitution of South Carolina is an example in this respect. The great requisite is, adequate protection for equality and justice, irrespective of color, and this condition the pending constitutions will guarantee, even after the proposed expurgation. The record to which the World appeals is against the assertion on which it rests its case.

Not more tenable is the appeal to Southern prejudice predicated upon the Fifteenth Amendment, which has been made a feature of reconstruction. The voters have nothing to do with this requirement. Its ratification is reserved for the Legislatures to be elected simultaneously with the vote on the constitutions. On that subject the people are not asked to say yea or nay, except as their preference may be indicated by the character and tendencies of the legislators they elect.

The Appointments.

Our Washington correspondent stated yesterday that "the excellence of their records had saved Collectors FIELD and BLAKE their places." That may be true. We do not doubt that the records of these officers are unimpeachable. But other officers, whose records are equally good, have not been saved thereby. The case of Assessor WEBSTER is one of the many in point. The revenue service has never had a more vigilant, vigorous or intelligent officer than he. He took, moreover, a bold stand in regard to the legal tax on brokers and bankers, and his position has been sustained by the Department. Yet he was very summarily ejected from office, without the assignment of any reason and under the pressure of some unknown influence. Nor is his case by any means a solitary one. The expectation which was general at the outset of the Administration, and was prompted by the President's declarations on the subject, that faithful and efficient officers would not be disturbed, no matter to what party they belonged, but especially if they were Republicans, has been grievously disappointed. Some of the best men in the service, both at home and abroad, whose record is unimpeachable and whose political orthodoxy is unquestioned, have been summarily removed and forced to give place to inferior but more clamorous applicants. In truth, the old style of making appointments, by accepting the pressure and dictation of politicians as the controlling influence, has been adhered to pretty closely. The promise, so loudly vaunted and so eagerly expected, seem to have been indefinitely postponed.

Party Responsibility.

In face of their protestations of economy the Assembly has just voted to buy a short canal somewhere in Chemung County, and to pay half a million of dollars for it, while everybody concedes that it is not worth five cents. It was zealously supported by that veteran reformer and model legislator, Father TRUMAN, and was opposed, among others, by Mr. HUSTED, of Westchester, who, according to the Tribune reporter, "fought it bitterly." The same authority adds:

"The latter gentleman remarked that whenever a big job voting money out of the Treasury came up, the Democrats solidly voted for it, and then threw the responsibility on the Republican majority by saying that if the latter wanted to stop this kind of stealing they have the votes to do it. Not a day passes that the truth of this assertion is not proved."

Not a day passes, the writer might have added, that the truth of both assertions is not proved. The Democrats are perfectly right in what they say. Naturally enough for them, they want to do all the stealing possible; and quite as naturally, they want to shirk the responsibility. And curiously enough, they have no difficulty in doing it. They have no trouble in getting enough Republicans to vote with them to carry their measures. In the Senate the votes of HUMPHREY, WILLIAMS, MATTOON and VAN PETTEN are always to be had for any venal project, no matter how flagrant and shameless, and the same sort of Republicans are always obtainable also in the Assembly.

Yet it is perfectly true that the Republicans have a majority in both Houses, and "have the votes" to stop this sort of stealing, if they wanted to. The inference is irresistible that they don't want to. Honesty is not one of the principles of the party,—is never insisted on as a party measure. All those Republicans who make it a rule to vote with the Democrats for the most nefarious schemes, when their votes are paid for, do not lose standing in their party by it: they are just as "good Republicans" as ever,—go to the party caucuses without objection, make loud and unchallenged protests of devotion to the welfare of the party, and denounce with great vehemence every man who has doubts on negro suffrage, or hesitates to alter the Constitution whenever the interests of the party seem to require it. They stand high in the party, are counted always as among its most "reliable" men, and are influential in branding as false to principle everybody who finds fault with them for disgracing and degrading the party which tolerates and screens them.

As long as such men are allowed to belong to the Republican Party, to share its honors and its power, and to overrule its action, the party must be content to bear the responsibility of their conduct. When it will drive them from its ranks, with the disgrace they have earned, it may then complain of the Democrats for using Republicans to pull their chestnuts out of the fire. But not till then.

Government Settlements with Criminals—The George Case.

We have had occasion several times to speak of the system of compromising claims in favor of the Government against persons charged with violation of law; but we never have had occasion to speak of a more remarkable case of such a compromise than the one narrated in the opinion of Judge BENEDICT, which our readers will find in our legal columns this morning. The matter was before the United States Circuit Court for the settlement of a controversy between the Treasury Department and the Custom-house officials in this City over the spoils of such a compromise. It seems that one HENRY HART was the real proprietor of a bonded warehouse at Nos. 290 and 291 West-street, and was also a member of a firm called J. W. GEORGE & Co., and that in the Summer of 1867 it was discovered by the Custom-house officers that there were frauds in that warehouse. Cases of cigars had been placed there in bond, which had been then taken from the warehouse to a store in New-street, occupied by GEORGE & Co., where the cigars were taken out and the cases filled up with poorer cigars or with blocks of wood, after which the cases were sent back to the bonded warehouse, and in time reexported. It was also found that quantities of spirits had also been taken out of the warehouse, ostensibly to a manufacturing establishment, but really to be sold without payment of the duties on them. Proceedings were taken by the officials to recover the amount of duties thus lost to the Government, and suit against HART to recover $400,000 was begun, property belonging to GEORGE & Co. and others was seized, and criminal proceedings were set on foot against all the parties involved. A proposition for a settlement of the matter was very soon made on behalf of the parties. GEORGE proposed to pay $80,000 in gold to settle his matter, and HART proposed to pay $50,000 in currency and the value of the property seized, being $25,700 more, all proceedings against all the parties to be dropped. The Custom-house officers recommended the settlement. GEORGE's $80,000 was deposited with the Collector, subject to the approval of the settlement by the Secretary of the Treasury, to whom the matter was referred. The Treasury Department found it difficult to ascertain from any data which could be furnished, what was the extent of the frauds and what amount of duties the Government had really lost. They finally had an interview with Mr. CRAIG, the lawyer of HART & GEORGE, who gave to them a statement as derived from his clients of an amount of goods, as goods which had been fraudulently removed; and though there was no means of positively finding out what were the duties on these goods, because that depended on values which were not known, the Department and CRAIG did finally settle on $59,772, as being the duties which the Government had lost. Then there had appeared thirty-two orders for the delivery of goods from the warehouse, which were fraudulent; and as there is a statute which affixes a penalty of $1,000 for fraudulently removing goods from a bonded warehouse, they added $32,000 in currency to the $59,772, which was to be paid in gold; and thereupon the Solicitor of the Treasury, by direction of the Secretary, instructed District-Attorney COURTNEY, on the payment by the parties of those sums, to stop all proceedings, both civil and criminal, against the parties.

Just here the matter took a still more singular shape. The counsel for the parties suggested to the District-Attorney that his parties might want record evidence of the payment of the money, whereupon a new suit was commenced by the District-Attorney against these parties to recover the two sums above mentioned; but in this suit they were stated to be not $59,772 in gold for duties, and $32,000 penalties, but to be all "forfeitures and penalties" for unlawfully removing goods from the bonded warehouse. The parties confessed judgment for the amounts, and the money was paid into Court in satisfaction of it.

Now at once arose the controversy in question. The Custom-house officials and the informers claimed that they were entitled to share not only in the $32,000, but also in the $59,772 in gold, claiming that the Government could have but half of each, and that they were entitled to the other half. The Treasury Department, hearing of the claim, insisted that the Government was entitled to all the $59,772, because that was duties and not penalties, and that the officials must be content with their share of the $32,000. The difficulty in the case was that the money had been paid in satisfaction of the judgment, which stated that that sum was not duties, but penalties and forfeitures. An effort was, therefore, made by Mr. TOWLE, the agent of the Department in charge of Custom-house cases in this City, to change the form of that judgment; but as that application was not made till the time allowed for the correction of a judgment had expired, no such correction could be made. The matter, therefore, came before the Court on the petition of the officials and informers to have their share, which they claimed, paid to them by the Court, and the facts in the whole matter were proved at great length.

The Judge has held that if the Court were to be controlled by that judgment in its disposition of the case, the Custom-house officers would get nothing, because they are only entitled to share in lawful penalties and forfeitures, whereas there was no forfeiture in the case, inasmuch as no goods were seized in that suit, and no case was stated for any lawful penalty to that amount. He takes up, therefore, the evidence as to the whole transaction, and concludes from the statements of the parties that the $59,772 was agreed upon as duties and must be treated as such, and that the officials were not entitled to share in it. This conclusion is entirely in accord with the spirit of the act of 1867, which provided that on the settlement of a forfeiture, the duties should be deducted before the officials can share in it.

The Judge finds it necessary to discuss the question of the power of the Secretary of the Treasury to make the compromise in question, and comes to the conclusion that he had no such power, because the law authorizing such compromises was not complied with in several particulars—especially in that it intended a settlement of criminal proceedings which was entirely beyond his power. We commend this part of the opinion especially to the attention of the new officers of the Government. We hope that the new men will give us in these respects new measures, and that old abuses will not be perpetuated or renewed.

We have given but a bare outline of the facts in this case. There are, however, in the particulars of it, many points of interest, and we shall refer to it again.

The Broadway Scheme.

Senators HUMPHREY, MATTOON, VAN PETTEN and WILLIAMS, Republicans, voted with the Democrats on Thursday in favor of the Broadway Railroad project, as they have voted in favor of nearly every outrageous scheme that had money in it, since they have been members of the Senate. It is no part of our business to inquire into their motives,—though we should feel inclined to stretch a point in this matter if we supposed anybody had any doubts on the subject.

Mr. HUMPHREY is the gentleman who was indicted a year or more ago for official malpractice of some sort or other; and Mr. MATTOON is the member who made such frequent visits to the Erie Railroad directors a year ago, and was so anxious to impress upon them the fact that members of the Legislature "could not live on their salaries," and who was reported to have sold his support to both sides in the famous Erie controversy, and to have received his pay from both, though he voted for only one. It is generally conceded that he is an ornament to his Oswego constituency, as well as to the Republican Party,—to say nothing of his being eminently useful—to himself. Of the other Republicans involved in this business, it is not necessary to say anything. We understand they are shining lights in their party, and are very "popular with their constituents," as is shown by the fact of their reelection. If all their schemes succeed this Winter, they can probably afford to retire from business.

Living in New-York.

Our State Legislature, after doing all in its power, in connection with our City Government, to drive residents out of our City into New-Jersey, has now gone to work at the other end of the line, and is preventing Jerseymen from supplying New-Yorkers with food. A bill has been ordered to a third reading in the Assembly, prohibiting residents of New-Jersey from having stalls in any of the New-York markets. The effect of this will, of course, be to make the supply of meat and vegetables to our citizens as close a monopoly as possible, and thus to enhance their price. In every point of view this is an act of pure stupidity. In view of the kind of legislation to which this City is subjected, it is really strange that it holds its own, in point of growth and prosperity, as well as it does. It cannot prosper permanently if things continue as they are now going on.

We observe that the bill in question received the ardent support of the Democratic members from this City, from which we infer that their constituents are much less interested in having cheap food than in having cheap liquor. In the latter commodity their representatives demand the utmost freedom of trade; while in the former they insist on the most stringent application of the restrictive policy of protection. The Legislature is doing all in its power to make rents, meat, vegetables, and all the necessaries of life, as dear as possible; the only thing it insists on making cheap is whisky.

The Car Drivers' Strike.

We have not the slightest sympathy with the Second-avenue Railroad Company in the contest it is waging with its conductors and drivers. The right and justice of the case seems to be wholly on the side of the latter. The Company has been in the habit of requiring them to make seven round trips a day, which involves about fifteen hours steady work,—which is quite as much as any class of laboring men ought to be required to perform. They now demand eight round trips, besides requiring them to wash their cars, attend to their horses, and perform other work, the effect of which is to extend their day's work to about seventeen hours. This is utterly unjust and unreasonable. We do not blame any class of day laborers for "striking" against such exactions.

But there may be men among them who, for the support of their families, would rather perform this amount of work than be thrown out of employment entirely, and they have a right to their choice. The strikers have no right to prevent them by violence from working as long and for as low wages as they choose; and any such violence should be punished as a breach of the peace and an invasion of private rights.

It is said the road is compelled to reduce its expenses by such an extension of the hours of labor, as it cannot pay its way without. Then it should be abandoned. It has no right to continue its operations by starving its employes or working them to death. This is only another evidence that we have too many roads, and that they are badly located. There is no class of our working population more poorly paid, or more severely overworked, than the conductors and drivers of our City cars. We hope that this attempt of the Second-avenue Road to give an extra turn to the screw, will not succeed.

MINOR TOPICS.

We have been requested by Judge PIERREPONT to say that the rumor to which we referred the other day, concerning the understanding on which he accepted the District-Attorneyship, is entirely unfounded. It is his intention to perform the duties of that office himself, and not to hand them over, in whole or in part, except to the necessary extent, to other parties. Nor does he intend to resign the office in favor of any other parties, and, least of all, of the gentleman whom he has selected to be the Deputy District-Attorney. He desires it to be understood, moreover, that he is in favor of the earliest possible trial of the Fullerton case, and will spare no efforts to bring it about.

The latest phase of spiritualism—the "spiritual-photograph" business—is to undergo legal investigation. There are prominent parties involved—including Mayor HALL as the instigator of the prosecution, and Judge EDMONDS as the defender of the accused. The opening of the case at the Tombs yesterday, was quite interesting, and the trial will be begun next Wednesday at the Court of Special Sessions. If spiritual photographs can be produced by ordinary scientific processes, the fact ought to be conclusively shown by actual demonstration.

The gallows is being worked very actively through this country of late. It is only in this City, where murders are most frequent, that the gibbet is practically abolished.

Since the opening of the present Administration large numbers of clerks and other employes have been discharged from the Departments at Washington. We hope that this means reduction of force and retrenchment of expenses in the administration of the Government.

The operations of the Second-avenue Railroad have been stopped the last two or three days because of the drivers' strike. We rather guess that in this case the Company will have to succumb. Fifteen hours a day is quite enough time for any man to work, and seventeen hours is altogether too much—even if it be paid for it.

Two of the three colored men recently nominated by the President for office have declined. This is the most decided evidence of superior sense on the part of the black race, over the white, that we have ever seen. Such incidents will do a good deal more than WENDELL PHILLIPS' eloquence or Democratic abuse to vindicate the wisdom of the Fifteenth Amendment.

It is intimated from Albany that Mr. SEXEL, who has the amendment of the Game laws of the State under charge, has submitted to the pressure of the Jersey fishermen, and has altered the bill in Committee so that it reads that the size of the mesh of the stake nets used in the rivers of this State shall be five instead of seven and a quarter inches. We hope, if this is true, that Mr. SEXEL will not have the face to recommend the appropriation of seven thousand dollars, with which to stock Hudson River with shad, asked for by the Commissioners. Mr. SEXEL ought to know, if he does not, that such a recommendation would simply be the means of robbing the State Treasury of that much money. We believe he knows that the size of the mesh, as altered in the bill, is too small; that no shad of a size proper to be used in breeding the fish in large quantities can pass such nets to the spawning grounds; and we hope the intimation alluded to is not true. How about it?

One of the participants in the late robbery at the den of "Reddy the Blacksmith" was yesterday sentenced for fifteen years. Is it not about time that the Police took steps to break up and close up the notorious saloon where this affair took place, and from which occurrences of a similar kind are constantly reported. It is probably the most dangerous place in the City of New-York, and the Police know it.

If the Forty Centuries which were on the top of the pyramid of Cheops in 1798 are there still, they will look down on another remarkable Gallic troupe, this year—and probably wonder what next! NAPOLEON I. carried learned men and philosophers along with his men-at-arms; and NAPOLEON III. is sending, or hoping to send, opera dancers along with the engineers. Egypt speculators are about making another "Mabille" in Cairo; and a number of the strong-footed Turbaroter of Paris are to go there to celebrate the Immalities. The customary boulevard, wine and phaetons, with their long, flabby skirts, and slow swimming, gliding motions, must give place to their pirouetting and trapeze-riding sisters of the West, and Egypt will take its place in the onward march of civilization.

The Tribune calls for a law making it illegal to set spring guns for the protection of property. It seems that a thief, while stealing corn from a crib in Warren County, was killed by a spring gun fixed for its protection. The Tribune thinks the man who set it ought to be indicted for manslaughter, and that a law ought to be passed for the protection of life under such circumstances. A more effectual remedy, we venture to suggest, would be to give up stealing. Spring guns can do no harm if they are not meddled with; and we scarcely think the owners of property are called on to render its theft free from all risk. It is a general rule of law and of common sense, that a man in committing a crime must take all its consequences. It seems to us a sound one, and eminently applicable to stealing corn. If this tenderness for crime and criminals goes on, we shall be asked by-and-by to furnish extra props for the limbs of our fruit trees, so that thieves may run less risk of damage if the limbs should happen to break under their weight.

The clerks of the Police Courts are a sleek set of gentlemen, and, considering the time they devote to the public service, are well compensated for their labors. But it is not in unregenerate human nature to be content, and the clerks want their salaries raised. They base their plea for an advance on the ground that they are obliged to be on duty on Sundays. But they knew that they would have to do this when they accepted their offices, and therefore the fact furnishes no reason for allowing their claim. The objectionable feature of their movement, however, is the attempt which is clandestinely made to incorporate in the tax levy an item of nearly $70,000 for past services on Sundays. It is to be hoped that this shameful piece of robbery will not be allowed, and that the Police Court clerks may be brought to their bearings.

"The system now in vogue is like that of sweeping one's parlor daily, and leaving the kitchen to be cleaned once a week." This passage, having reference to the common mode of cleaning the streets, is very much to the point, and should be remembered. While our central streets and chief avenues are kept tolerably clean, the back streets where poor people reside are left to fester in their filth, with ranges of dirty barrels standing like sentries along the sidewalk for days together. The contractor should give more care to such streets than to Fifth-avenue or Broadway. At the same time, an inspector of houses should be appointed to see that they have proper drainage, so as to leave the contractor no excuse on the score of slops thrown into the streets.

The statement prepared by the Citizens' Association in regard to the tax levies for this City, which will be found in another column, merits the careful attention of the Legislature. If it be true that the estimates can be reduced by two millions of dollars, as claimed by the Association, the Legislature owes it to our overburdened City to scrutinize the list closely and throw out every unnecessary item of expense.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theatrical.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The last performance of Mlle. JANAUSCHEK is announced for this evening; "Medea" will be performed. A worthy and elevated entertainment will be missed from the programme of local amusements when this artiste departs. There has been some talk of a farewell testimonial for Mlle. JANAUSCHEK, in the shape of a benefit performance, at which she might give her promised attempt in an English part. We hope the matter will not be dropped.

BROADWAY THEATRE.

Mr. and Mrs. BARNEY WILLIAMS are to give their last performance of the "Emerald Ring" this evening. The piece will also be played at the matinée. As next week will be the last of the season and of Mr. WILLIAMS' lease of this house, he proposes to revive some of those old dramas and farces which are more closely associated with the early successes of himself and wife. "The Fairy Circle" and "Yankee Courtship" are to lead the revivals.

WOOD'S MUSEUM.

Miss MARRIOTT is to appear as Bianca for the last time, and the last performance of "Fazio" will be given at Wood's Museum this evening. The matinée will be discontinued at the Museum after to-day, in order that the new pantomime may be hurried forward.

VARIOUS ITEMS.

Mr. and Mrs. FLORENCE are to make another visit to Europe early in May. They are at the Metropolitan Hotel at present.

Mr. and Mrs. MARK SMITH go to Europe this Summer.

The receipts of the Humphrey Bland benefit were $1,060.

A collection of interesting relics of Mexican history and life and manners is now upon exhibition at No. 765 Broadway, and is very well worth a visit.

Matinees To-Day.

Fifteen matinées are announced for to-day; the third "Tempest" matinée takes place at the Grand Opera House; the fourth matinée of "School" will be given at Wallack's; the first "Othello" matinée is promised at Booth's; "Humpty Dumpty" has its 449th performance at the Olympic; the "Forty Thieves" completes the eleventh week at Niblo's; the tenth matinée of the "Seven Dwarfs" is to be given at the Bowery Theatre; the last matinée of "Aladdin" takes place at Wood's Museum; and matinées will be given at the Fifth-avenue Theatre, at the New-York Circus, &c.

"Pluto," which has been the cleverest and, so far, the most successful of Mr. FANIE's burlesques, is to have its eightieth performance at the Theatre Comique to-day. Mr. LINGARD will also give his newest songs and mimicries at the matinée as well as in the evening.

Miss ELISE HOLT gives her first matinée since her recovery at the Waverley Theatre to-day. The burlesque of "Ivanhoe" is to be played.

Mr. GEORGE W. MORGAN, the distinguished organist, will play at the twelfth concert at Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, this afternoon.

PERSONAL.

Another of our leading artists, Mr. GRÉNOUX, is about to leave for Europe, and preparatory to his departure a sale of some of his best pictures, including a number of fine studies from nature, will be made by LEEDS. The sale will take place next Wednesday.

We are glad to learn that Mr. WEED has returned from his Southern trip much improved in health.

A lecture was delivered last evening by COL. R. DIDOSWAY, Esq., before the Bloomingdale Lyceum, on some of the public charac

CANAL TOLLS.

Report of the Committee by the Board of Canal Commissioners to be Published.

The following report was presented to the Canal Board yesterday:

ALBANY, Friday, April 16, 1869.

The Committee to whom it was referred to revise the toll sheet, &c., respectfully report:

That in attempting to make any important reductions in the rates of toll upon the canals, they encountered difficulties resulting from the charges upon the canal revenues, and which, in their opinion, render it inexpedient, if not impracticable, to make any changes at this time which will essentially diminish the net revenues from this source. While it is conceded that the canals were made primarily for commerce, and not for revenue, it is also conceded that the cost of their construction and maintenance must and should be paid from their earnings; and it follows that, until the debt created for that construction is discharged, the tolls should be so regulated as to yield a revenue sufficient for the payment of that debt as it matures, so far as it can be done without detriment to commerce. In other words, the subject of revenue must enter into the question of tolls, so long as the obligations of the State growing out of the construction of the canals remain unsatisfied.

The constitutional charges upon the canal revenues are sacred, and cannot be ignored or repudiated, even for a time, they will more than absorb the entire net earnings of the canals. The annual charges upon those revenues for the current year and they will not be less for several years to come) are:

For the support of the Government	$600,000
For the canal debt sinking fund	1,500,000
For the canal debt sinking fund	2,200,000
Making in aggregate of	$4,000,000 to be paid from the surplus revenues of the canals, and it there shall be any serious deficiency from year to year, it must be supplied by taxation, or by a deficiency loans which only extend the day of payment and postpone the time when the State will be fully master of the situation, and be able to regulate the tolls with reference only to the interests of commerce. All who desire a reduction of tolls should earnestly work for an early extinguishment of the canal debt.

The surplus revenues for the last year were $6,160,868 13; less by nearly $700,000 than the amount necessary to meet the demands for the current year.

The Auditor estimates the surplus revenues for the present year at $4,500,000 only, and it is not probable that they will greatly, if at all, exceed that sum.

It follows that no reduction of the rates which will materially reduce the gross amount of tolls ought to be made, unless it can be shown that other and greater interests will be subserved. If by a reduction of the rates the revenues of the canals would be so increased that the gross receipts would not be diminished, they should be reduced.

That it is desirable and the true policy of the State to reduce the rate of toll upon its canals as rapidly as practicable there can be no doubt, and whenever the cost of their construction shall be paid off, the tolls should be reduced to the minimum—that is, to that point which will yield only the revenues necessary for their superintendence and repairs.

The obligations now resting upon the canal revenues once discharged, the necessary burdens for State purposes upon the people passing through them channels, will be very slight and scarcely more nominal. But while the State is a debtor and her canals are mortgaged and the tolls pledged, she must respect the obligations and submit to the necessary conditions of her position. Hitherto the tolls have been judiciously arranged and imposed with such discrimination that the trade and commerce of the canals have been fostered and encouraged, and the Statehood been able to fulfill its obligations and preserve its credit. The traffic and tonnage of the canals have increased very rapidly within a few years, and rival channels and means of transit have contended vigorously for the carrying trade, but the canals have kept pace with the demands upon them, and are still masters of the traffic for which they were constructed.

The statistics of the tolls, tonnage and locks show a constantly increasing rather than a decreasing business. It is neither possible or desirable that the canals should engross all the carrying business of the State, and cannot fully prevent all competing rates and routes of traffic. It is enough that they accomplish the original purpose of their founders—afford a cheap and feasible highway for the transportation of merchandise through and between different points within the State. In doing this they not only enrich the State but develop the wealth and resources of the entire West, and make it tributary to the wealth of our own State. The Western States, while they are subject to none of the burdens of taxation for the support of the canals, receive less direct or valuable than those which more to our own State. But the growth and development of the West, as well as the increasing trade of the State, the canals and will have other channels and routes for transportation and no one route or means can or will engross the entire trade of either. The Erie Canal with or without tolls cannot control the entire carrying trade of the West, or of the State along its line.

New routes will be opened, new facilities devised, and other modifications will which will produce changes in the carriage of goods and by some of these trade may be lost to the canals, and by others may be gained. The world and its commerce is not yet stereotyped, and will not be for a long time to come, and no one can foretell the growing out of the changes upon the canals will give direction to commerce. Not unfrequently the question of time as well as facilities for receipt and delivery decides the matter; for example, flour, forms a large item in canal tonnage, is now transportable, and probably no more flour would be carried upon the canals if no tolls were charged, while grain and some other articles would be carried by canal if the tolls were doubled. But in view of the rapidly developing resources of the country, and the coming of new routes and developing of new facilities for the carriage of property, by which the competition with the canals is yearly becoming more earnest, and, as it is claimed, more perilous to the business of the canals, it is a matter of necessity that the State should exercise the power day, so that the State can be the master of its own property, and able, as owner, freely to regulate the tolls in the interest of commerce, rather than, as a debtor, in the interest of its creditors. It would be impolitic, by any change in the rates of toll, to postpone the payment of the canal debt a day beyond the earliest at which it can be discharged, having proper reference to all the interests involved.

Aside from the statistics it is quite evident that the present rates of tolls have not been so onerous as to divert trade from the canals. Two considerations, one in, that these are trusted in and familiar with the navigation of the canals are earnestly pleading for increased facilities for navigating the canals, and to relieve them from the pressure upon their present capacity, and for an amendment of the Constitution, with the view to an enlargement, and all concede the necessity of an immediate removal of the wall benches and close walls and a doubling of the locks, in order to increase the capacity, and the other is that the tonnage brought upon these hands much of the property carried upon the canals, have and found it necessary, in order to prevent loss to their business, to reduce these charges, which are claimed and not denied to be exorbitant, and at least double of the amount necessary to secure a liberally remunerative compensation.

Commerce is not crippled nor trade diverted by State tolls so long as it can and does pay exorbitant profits to those engaged in it. The statistics are in harmony with the inferences to be drawn from the considerations named, to wit: that the business of the canals is not impeded by the present rates of toll.

The tolls and tonnage of the canals from 1856 have been as follows:

	Tons.	Tolls.
1856	4,352,261	$6,252,262
1857	4,726,551	5,980,252
1858	4,776,238	4,696,000
1859	4,846,000	4,700,000
1860	4,442,278	4,500,000

The table annexed, marked A, prepared in the office of the Auditor, exhibits the comparative results of the years 1867 and 1868.

The following table will exhibit the total movement of anthracite coal, the rate of toll thereon, the tonnage of bituminous coal, the total shipment of anthracite from tide-water and the tolls paid to the State for each year, commencing with 1854:

Year.	Total movement of anthracite.	Rate of toll thereon.	Total movement of bituminous cite.	Total toll received on bituminous cite.	Anthracite tide water.	Total toll received on anthracite.

1869	487,000	.....	514,311	514,344	126,000	.....

The total amount of toll received on bituminous coal has been as follows: In 1862, $93,011; 1863, $144,750; 1864, $87,750; 1865, $87,500; 1866, $87,500; 1867, $87,500; 1868, $110,871.

The total movement of certain leading articles for the years 1867 and 1868 is exhibited by the following table:

	1867.	1868.
Flour, bbls	599,324	575,000
Wheat, bushels	12,256,000	14,425,000
Corn, bushels	14,468,000	12,487,000
Merchandise, tons	519,000	600,000

That we cannot compete in foreign markets with the canals of other States, may be attributed to the high price of labor; any consequent greater cost of production with us, and the large profits made by those who come between the producer and shipper, rather than to the amount of tolls charged. The charge for tolls upon the Erie Canal from Buffalo to Troy,

These considerations and others that might be enumerated appear to be conclusive against any very general and radical reduction of tolls, but they do not necessarily militate against the careful review of the toll-sheet, and the Committee are of the opinion that there may be a reduction of the tolls upon many articles without diminishing the revenue, and that, to some extent, it is possible that the revenue may be increased by attracting to the canals trade which might, but for the present rates of toll, be diverted.

A reduction of the tolls upon coal has been strenuously urged upon this Board, and it is claimed that the present rate tends to encourage an extensive monopoly by which the citizens of the State are compelled to pay exorbitant profits and enormous profits to the coal monopolists.

If it were within the province of this Board to which over the trade and business of the State and prevent all unjust monopolies, it is not easy to see how the trifling duty charged upon coal in its transit upon the canal can tend to the direct benefit of

The charge upon a net ton of coal from tide-water to Lake Erie is but 69 cents, and to Rochester but 60 cents, and from Hinks to Rochester it is a little less than 1 mill per mile. A reduction of the charges by one-fourth, or even by one-half would not so affect the price of coal at any point upon the canal as to interfere with or control the action of the coal dealers, and we apprehend that other now would not be disturbed by any action of this board on the subject of tolls, and the tables embodied in this report demonstrate that the interests of the State will not permit a reduction at the present time.

The Committee do recommend certain reductions and modifications in the toll-sheet which appear by the sheet herewith presented. We recommend a reduction of the tolls to one mill upon certain articles going from tide-water which are carried by railroads at special rates, and other essential modifications and reductions are recommended, which will simplify the toll-sheet, and, as it is believed, will meet the approval of the public, and not impair the revenue.

Sale of Valuable Engravings, Chromos, &c.

There was a large and fashionable attendance yesterday at the salesroom of Mr. KNOEDLER, successor to GOUPIL & Co., corner of Ninth-street and Broadway, the occasion being the auction sale, without reserve, of a valuable stock of engravings, photos and chromos, in consequence of Mr. KNOEDLER's removal to his new store corner of Twenty-second-street and Fifth-avenue. The sale began at 11 o'clock A. M., Messrs. H. D. MINER & SARGENT being the auctioneers. The prices brought were, as a rule, very fair, though, in some instances, the bidding was less than the excellence of the pieces warranted. Many of the engravings had heavy walnut and gilt frames. Among the more prominent lots sold were the following:

Gypsy Encampment, ebony and gilt frame, $22 50; Niagara, chrome, $22 50; Jews Before the Temple, $25; The Colleen, large size, very large size, $22; Market Morning, fat girl, $21; Christ Blessing Children, $16 50; Dante at Ravenna, $15; Hunt of the Medici, colored, engraving, $14; Alone in the World, photo, $14; Immortality, $14; Washington and His Generals, $12 50; The Prison Window, $10; Noon on the Sea Shore, and Evening in the Tropics, companion pieces, colored engravings, $10; Mother's Curse, photo, $10; From Gaeta to Rome, $9; Washington, $8; Bed-time, $8; Return of the Travelers, $8. There were many engravings sold also at prices varying from $1 to $6. The sale is to be continued to-day at 11 A. M. A number of oil-paintings are comprised in to-day's catalogue, many of them being sold after LAMBDIN, PAUL POTTER, MURILLO and FARD, and original pictures by KOEKKOEK, SCHENCK, DOBOT, ROSBEL, GAULE, PLASS, BAUTZER and WEBEWELE.

THOS. MCKENNA, of No. 120 West-street, fell through the hatchway of No. 180 Fulton-street, from the third to the first floor, when he sustained severe injuries.

Insect Powder.

HOW TO TELL THE GENUINE ARTICLE.—Prof. R. LYON while traveling in Asia, discovered a flower, which, when powdered, is sure death to every kind of Insect, from a Cockroach to a Fly. He protected his discovery by letters-patent, Government stamps, &c., put his signature upon every flask of the article, and named it LYON'S MAGNETIC INSECT POWDER. He imparted his secret to no one but his successor.

Purchasers of Insect Powder—and it is used in almost every house—must see to it that they are not deceived by worthless imitations and counterfeits. The signature of R. Lyon is the purchaser's guarantee. Look sharp for it, and buy no Insect Powder that does not bear it. It may be had of Druggists and Family Stores, at 25 cents per flask.

CARD OF THANKS.

To Dr. Samuel T. R. Beck, No. 46 Bond-st., New-York City:

MY DEAR SIR: You will pardon the publicity of this mode of tendering you my grateful thanks is likely to end, but as I know of no other manner of publishing my heartfelt gratitude for your skill and kindness, I hope you will consider this a sufficient excuse.

I was seized with a severe attack of paralysis (my second one) on the 10th day of March, 1868, and in my great affliction, for humanly speaking, I owed your professional skill. Twenty-four hours after your arrival I had entire control of my limbs. I was completely restored when my paralytic stroke, and the time the perfect use of my limbs, body and hands.

I think God has now as well as I ever was, and will always remember, with the warmest feelings your disinterested friendship as a physician.

To those who know me I will regard this card only as the effusion of a grateful heart. I am always sincerely yours,

Indeed, never had any safe. What it did have was an EXPRESS MESSENGER BOX, not made by Lillie, protected in a brick and stone vault, the outside door of which was manufactured by Lillie as a FIRE-PROOF ONLY, and SOLD AS SUCH, to a Philadelphia iron worker, who manufactured the inside doors for the safe, and then, which locked the lock! ANOTHER GRAND ORIGINAL ROMANCE IN THE

SUNDAY MERCURY.

Dona Luna Cortez, the Spanish Countess has written and published a romance in the Literary Attack, and carried off as a prize the

of one of the most original and interesting stories that has ever lent interest to the columns of an American Journal. This extraordinary production, entitled

WOMAN'S LOVE;

OR,

LIKE AND UNLIKE,

is from the pen of the Dona Luna Cortez,

J. P. SMITH,

author of "Shadow," "Mystery," "Milly Myers," &c., and is in all respects the most brilliant and exciting work of fiction that has appeared in the form of that gifted writer has yet from the pen.

For special terms of publication, and the sum transmitted to Mr. J. P. SMITH for the work.

TO BE COMMENCED TO-MORROW

in the

SUNDAY MERCURY.

Arrangements have been made for publishing a new work from the pen of a lady of rare literary ability, and it was generally supposed that he had retired from his travels and would write no more. But, after having accumulated his mental power by a long rest, he has, with the growing effort of his genius, which may fairly challenge comparison, as regards sectional interest and vigor of style, with the productions of Bulwer Lytton, Wilkie Collins, or Reade.

The tale opens in a London gambling-house, where the reader is introduced to its principal, Mr. Peter Hartly, and two young men, Frank Fairfax, Harry Hartly, the nephew of a former partner in the concern, and Colonel Trelog, an elder, and gentlemanly, the old school, connoisseur, by his friends, Sir Peter Fairfax Kingsfield, to obtain some valuable information in the hands of the firm, which Sir William had applied for by letter without avail. Colonel Trelog, having heard some evil rumors in relation to the gambling house, personally demanded the information. The demand is met by a contemptuous refusal, and an altercation occurs, in which he receives the firm with an intention to demand his friend. Finally, however, the document are produced and the Colonel is satisfied and apologizes.

From this point commences the development of one of the most intricate and thrilling series of events received by the human brain, involving a series of adventures which it is not too much to say, have never been paralleled in fiction or romance. Yet the story is from all its parts, and some of the incidents are unquestionably of a

is a character in the story. In fact, there is not a single figure in the ever-painted moving panorama that does not stand out in strong relief, a distinct and life-like entity. As a prominent example take Morris Rockards, the a perfect embodiment of all the worst characteristics of the most heartless and villainous of his tribe. Nor is the story without a female character, for the reader will see that the subject of "Woman's Love; or, Like and Unlike," displays his marvelous insight into the nature of the fairer portion of humanity. The most and tenderest traits of humanity are developed in the highminded Hartly, the brave and confiding Rachel Elmore (his betrothed), and the brave and devoted Mary Fairfax, the sister of Frank Fairfax. The villains and ruffians are drawn with a hand so heartily true to nature as that of Salvator Rosa, when he immortalized on canvas the brigands of Italy; while his lineaments of the gentlemen of the Jockey Club are drawn with a delicacy and fill of soft and tender light as the landscapes of Claude Lorraine.

That portion of the narrative which describes the villainy of the crowd belonging to the gang of Sir Peter Fairwick & Co. is unrivaled in its graphic and fine. A celebrated financier, who occupied a prominent position among English capitalists some years ago, but who is now forgotten, is said to have sat for the model of Sir Peter Fairwick & Co. In the character of Mr. Hartly's Sir Peter, and it is also hinted that if all the scandalously note of the original could be probed to the bottom, he would be found to have sat for the model of the Jew, who held up to scorn and ridiculing in this inimitable story.

The SUNDAY MERCURY, since the commencement of the present year, has made another onward step in the path of its success. Its pages have been added to the varied column, and its field of intelligence has been greatly enlarged. It may now be justly said to include in its compass the world, and well may it be said that the SUNDAY MERCURY is the most widely circulated of the United States. Every week a vast amount of original matter, from the pen of a large number of writers, is spread out, as much as any Metropolitan daily paper, and about four times as much as many of its weekly contemporaries. To furnish the Sunday feast of news and current literature, the SUNDAY MERCURY has an army of contributors and letters of which the public, who profit by the brains employed and cash expended, have no conception. The proprietors and staff of the SUNDAY MERCURY is larger than that of any of the other publications in this country, daily or weekly. Argus had not much over than are constantly on the hunt for the most valuable intelligence for the GREAT SUNDAY NEWSPAPER. The SUNDAY MERCURY is more nearly than that of any American journal of a purely literary character, and the commercial and financial news, political news, court news, theatrical and sporting news, foreign news and in fact all the intelligence that appears in the many documents into which the SUNDAY MERCURY's fifty-six columns are subdivided, is as fresh, as authentic and as comprehensive as it is possible for a well-organized system of collection and arrangement to make it.

To these very valuable and attractive editorial articles on all manner of subjects of direct and indirect interest to the people at large, which appear from time to time in the columns, are universally admitted to be the most attractive and complete that have ever been published in either part of the Atlantic Ocean and Gulf regions, and of course of all the phases of American social life, high and low, as have been given in the columns of the SUNDAY MERCURY, cannot be found in any book (or in all the books) purporting to depict the social life of the American people, to say nothing of the other portions of the Union.

The telegraphic dispatches in the SUNDAY MERCURY cover nearly the whole world, and they have this advantage over all others, that on the same day, which they are received, they are in the other newspapers have gone to press, and are consequently the

The SUNDAY MERCURY is intended to inform the public that such a rapid and extraordinary increase of circulation as never before marked the career of a Metropolitan newspaper has been the result of these efforts to render it the most attractive of all sheets.

The weekly sales of the SUNDAY MERCURY are much larger than the daily sales of any Metropolitan morning journal, and four times larger than those of all the other sheets combined, and that Sunday newspapers printed in New-York. Attach themselves from the records of the Internal Revenue Department verifying this statement, have been repeatedly published, and the fact is so notorious everywhere that it is universally accepted as true.

AN EXTRA EDITION of the thousand copies will be published in anticipation of an extraordinary and universal demand for the opening chapters of J. P. SMITH'S new serial story of which will be continued regularly from week to week until completed.

WOMAN'S LOVE;

OR,

It will be advisable for all who wish to MAKE SURE of beginning at the beginning of the New Serial Story, to order the SUNDAY MERCURY in advance, as in all probability the entire issue of the SUNDAY MERCURY will be swept off by Sunday noon.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Only a moderate number of persons assembled at the Salesroom yesterday, and but little interest was manifested. The bidding was very slow and the utmost efforts of the auctioneers seemed useless. The parties were not interested and would not be, and the day generally was very unsatisfactory. The temporary excitement has again disappeared, and left the market, if possible, duller and flatter than ever. The great demand for City property is over for the season, and the demand for country property has hardly commenced. It is but natural that this lull should now exist. The only wonder is that it did not commence sometime before it did. [illegible] with the vast numbers of unimproved lots [illegible] taxes on; all this excitement which existed, the extravagant prices at first really obtained, but latterly only seemingly so; the number of bogus sales, &c., &c., it is truly wonderful that the market has held on as well as it has. Now a change has occurred, and it was desirable for many reasons that such a change should happen. The spirit of speculation, with its attendant tricks and devices, was gaining too much headway in the salesroom. Old, experienced and well-informed property owners would not visit it, many not only refusing to buy, but also to sell, fearing to have any connection with the sales, no matter of what nature, until a more sober spirit should possess the frequenters of the room, and the sales once more be honest and legitimate. The probabilities are that this great falling off will be of decided benefit to all parties concerned. Property, in and out of town, will sell for all that it is worth; more than that it should not bring. Real estate owners must give up their fanciful ideas, and be content to receive good fair prices for the lots they offer for sale. The practice of putting up property with a limit, at as exhorbitant a rate as was in some instances realized when people were real-estate mad, refusing to sell when fair offers are made, preferring to bid in the lots and try them again at some future time, should be stopped. The old prices cannot reasonably be expected again very soon; people have [illegible] down; they seem to realize that more property has been purchased this season than will be improved for many years; that many of the up-town locations most extensively advertised are quite barren, not drained, streets not cut through, and no chance of immediate improvement; that many who have purchased largely cannot hold; that a great deal of property will consequently be offered in the market again, in many instances sacrificed, and they are content to wait, rather than buy now, when everything is so unsettled, unless they can purchase at real-estate figures. The owners must sooner or later come to this belief, and the sooner the better, for every piece of property for which a fair price is offered, but which is bid in and not sold, serves to injure the general market. If the auctioneers will impress these facts upon the minds of persons bringing their property to sell, they will save themselves much unprofitable labor and deserve the thanks of the public.

Country property is just commencing to be offered. Several sales are announced for the coming week, some at the Exchange Salesroom, others on the premises to be sold. The latter is the more popular way of disposing of large tracts, which are to be cut up into building lots. The buyers being on the ground can judge better how desirable the lots are; and, after a free ride and a free lunch, standing in the open air, on a clear sunyday, a man is in better humor to buy, than when penned up in the gloomy, barren basement dignified by the name of "salesroom," with the cries of half a dozen auctioneers ringing in his ears, the cold shivers running over him, visions of cold and rheumatism and the snuffles dancing before him, and only a little streak of sunshine visible, coming in through the south-side windows, just enough to remind him how miserable he is or should be.

To-day very little will be done. Messrs. ROBERT A. HAGGERTY & CO. will, by order of GEO. W. MCLEAN, Esq., Street Commissioner, sell all the buildings and parts of buildings from the southerly side of Fulton-street to the northerly side of Morris-street, required for the extension of Church-street. The condition is that all the materials shall be removed from the site of the contemplated street within thirty days after the day of sale.

The sales for Monday are as follows:

Messrs. MULLER, WILKINS & Co. will sell, by order of HENRIETTA MCLEAN, executrix of HENRIETTA VAN DE WEILE, deceased, the three-story high-stoop brick house and lot No. 215 West Twenty-fourth-street, north side, west of Seventh-avenue; the four-story English basement brick house and lot No. 240 West Forty-third-street, south side; ten lots situate on the south side of Sixth-street, Midwood, Brooklyn, commencing 40 feet 8 inches west of Fifth-avenue, each 20x100 feet; these lots are near the Fourth-avenue Boulevard, which is 120 feet wide, and one also within four blocks of Prospect Park; the two first-class four-story brown-stone front houses and lots Nos. 128 and 130 East Thirty-seventh-street, Murray Hill, commencing on the southwest corner of Thirty-seventh-street and Lexington-avenue; the two lots of land, with the brick cottage and brick office thereon, Nos. 608 and 606 Hudson-street, opposite Abingdon-square; the lot of land, with the brick factory on the front and the three-story and basement brick house on the rear, No. 9 Jane-street, near Greenwich-avenue. They also have an executor's sale of the property known as the Newtown Hotel, at Newtown, L. I., about three and a half miles distant from Hunter's Point, (Thirty-fourth-street Ferry.) The hotel was formerly kept and owned by JACKSON HICKS, deceased. It is near the Fashion Course, Flushing Railroad Depot, and two and a half miles from the town of Flushing. They will also sell the lease of lot, together with the buildings on the rear thereof, No. 38 Trinity-place.

Mr. JAMES M. MILLER will sell the lot of land on the northeast corner of Eighth-avenue and One Hundred and Forty-second-street, with the three-story and basement frame house in front of lot, and a two-story and cellar frame house in rear, fronting on One Hundred and Forty-second-street; also several pieces of Brooklyn property.

On Tuesday, Messrs. BLEECKER, SON & CO. will sell on the premises at Plainfield, N. J., about 200 plots and villa lots, situate on Fourth and Fifth streets, and on Clinton and Lexington avenues.

WASHINGTON.

More Nominations Sent to the Senate by the President.

A Large Number of Revenue and Foreign Officers Confirmed.

Celebration of Emancipation Day by Colored Citizens.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 16.

The Senate went into Executive Session to-day at 12 o'clock, and was engaged principally in acting on nominations until the time of adjournment. The number of people at the Capitol was very small in proportion to the crowds which have thronged the Senate portion of the building for the last two or three days. The marked diminution of the number of strangers here seems to indicate that the office-seekers are fast leaving the city for their homes, to engage in, it is to be trusted, some more profitable occupation than loitering around doors of Committee-rooms, watching Presidential communications and results of Senatorial secret deliberations.

The daily message from the President was received about 3 o'clock this afternoon. It created some little excitement of course, and there was a rush to the President's (temporarily the newspaper men's) room to ascertain its contents. Many anxious individuals were disappointed and half a dozen were made glad. The day was unmarked by the occurrence of any particular episode worth chronicling.

THE NEW NOMINATIONS.

Colonel A. H. MARKLAND, of Kentucky, formerly Superintendent of Army Mails, was nominated for Third Assistant Postmaster-General, and W. H. WADSWORTH, Esq., formerly a Republican Member of Congress from the State, as Commissioner to adjust claims under the treaty with Mexico.

NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED.

There was a large list of confirmations to-day, among which were Governor CURTIN, Minister to Russia; THOMAS H. NELSON, Minister to Mexico; General ANDREWS, Minister to Denmark, and Governor KIRK, Minister to the Argentine Republic. Quite a list of Consuls were also confirmed, among whom were FREEMAN H. MORSE, Consul-General at London, and THOMAS B. VAN BUREN, Consul-General at Florence.

General PARKER, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, was confirmed to-day, and will enter on the duties of his office on Monday.

REJECTED NOMINATIONS.

Three rejections occurred this afternoon—W. R. McMANIN, Postmaster at Salem, Ill., and R. J. WORDEN, Postmaster at Lawrence, Kansas. In this case the nomination was favorably reported by the Post Office Committee, and defended by Senator POMEROY, but Lawrence being Senator ROSS' home he resisted the confirmation because, as he said, Mr. WORDEN was personally obnoxious to him. A warm discussion followed, but the Senate adhered to a rule that has prevailed to some extent heretofore, and rejected Mr. WORDEN on this ground solely, by a vote of thirty-eight to eight. The next case was that of Captain A. J. RICKS, nominated as Pension Agent at Knoxville. There was little analogy between the cases, but BROWNLOW took advantage of the precedent just established, and called RICKS as being personally obnoxious to him, and the Senate being committed in the one case, was obliged to sacrifice a gallant soldier to appease the spleen of BROWNLOW, whose opposition was based wholly upon the fact that his own son-in-law was Captain RICKS' unsuccessful competitor for the nomination. Captain RICKS served meritoriously through the war, during the latter years on the staff of General, now Secretary COX, and the President made the appointment upon the full submission of all the papers of all the candidates. The Senate may adhere to such an unjust rule, but the Senators who invoke its enforcement will scarcely achieve any advantage from it.

THE COMMISSIONER OF PATENTS.

Colonel FISHER, the new Commissioner of Patents, left here to-day for Cincinnati, where he will surrender his entire business as a patent lawyer, prior to assuming the duties of his new position, which he will do on his return on Thursday next. There has been some comment that a man should be selected for this position who had been extensively engaged in the advocacy of patent cases; but as Colonel FISHER thus completely abandons his business, the criticism cannot hold good in his case.

EMANCIPATION CELEBRATION.

The largest portion of the colored people of the District of Columbia were in the streets of Washington to-day, which was unusually Summerlike. The occasion was the celebration of the emancipation anniversary. The ceremonies consisted of a military and civic procession with music and banners and all the other paraphernalia of such demonstrations. A neat stage was erected in front of the City Hall, over which was the American flag, while on the front were the inscriptions, "All the world shall know that we are men." "Abraham Lincoln, the Great, Emancipator—we shall ever honor thy memory." "Welcome the day we celebrate." Quite a number of private residences were gaily decorated with the national flags. One or two riotous demonstrations are reported to have occurred during the day; but there was no serious disturbance, and the disorderly parties were promptly arrested. As the procession passed the White House the President appeared at one of the windows, and repeatedly bowed in acknowledgement of the cheers which greeted him.

THE PENSION BUREAU.

Mr. COX, Ex-Commissioner of Pensions, will remain in charge of that Bureau until about the 1st of May, when Mr. VAN AERNAM, the new Commissioner, will enter on his duties.

THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Secretary BOUTWELL is reducing the clerical force of the Treasury Department as rapidly as possible. Up to 1 o'clock yesterday the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, WILLIAM A. RICHARDSON, Esq., signed 100 dismissals of lady clerks, and 100 more will be signed by him during the week. The vacancies thus created will be permanent.

PERSONAL.

Telegrams have been sent from Boston to the Massachusetts Senators in this city, by prominent and influential Republicans, protesting in the strongest terms against the removal of General CODDINGTON and the appointment of General HARRIMAN; but, Massachusetts having been so richly taken care of, her Senators must take HARRIMAN.

Dr. CHARLES B. TAFT, of this city, has been appointed Postmaster of the Senate, in place of J. M. EDMUNDS, Esq., removed.

Colonel AMOS WEBSTER yesterday tendered his resignation as Colonel to the Secretary of War, in order to enter upon his duties as Register of Wills to-day.

Colonel John A. CAMPBELL, the New Governor for Wyoming Territory, took the oath of office yesterday before Associate Justice SWAYNE, of the United States Supreme Court, and left for his new field of duty last evening.

There are over 2,000 applicants for thirty-five positions in the gift of the Superintendent of the Treasury Building.

Dispatches to the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday, April 16.

COMPTROLLER BROADHEAD.

It is stated to-day at the Treasury Department that Second Comptroller BROADHEAD has received a letter from Secretary BOUTWELL intimating him that the Department has no intention of dispensing with his services, in consequence of which Mr. BROADHEAD will not tender his resignation.

THE LOUISIANA ELECTIONS.

The sub-committee, of the Committee of Elections, consisting of Representatives SHERMAN, of Ohio, (Chairman,) BURNEY, of Missouri, and KERR, of Indiana, have agreed to commence their investigations in New-Orleans the 8th of May, taking up the five Congressional districts in their order, and examine into the character of the last Congressional election, and everything relating to that subject. It is expected that the parties on both sides will furnish witnesses to the sub-committee, who expect to occupy the whole of that month in the business which will take them thither.

CABINET MEETING.

This being the regular Cabinet day, all the members were present. Previous to the meeting a large number of Senators called, and had interviews with the President.

UNITED STATES SENATE.

Extra Session.

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 16.

The Senate met at noon.

THE PRAYER.

The Chaplain in prayer alluded to the emancipation celebration in progress to-day, and thanked God for the action, which, proceeding from these halls, had established liberty and equality throughout the land. He prayed that the efforts of the people who were to-day celebrating their emancipation would be directed toward elevating and improving the condition and education of their race, and that the Divine blessing would rest upon their endeavors.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

On motion of Mr. CONKLING the Senate proceeded to the consideration of Executive business.

THE ROGERS MURDER.

Application for Relief by the Vagrants—Statement of the Prisoner Robinson.

All the details of the Rogers murder and of the subsequent events attending the dismay attempts to detect and arrest the murderers are still fresh in the public mind, and do not need to be related now that the case comes again, and probably for the last time, before the Courts. It is well known that of all the persons arrested for supposed complicity in the murder all have been discharged except the vagrants JOHN ROBINSON alias James Maher, and EDWARD REILLY, the two victims of DELANOY's story about the coal. These two men, it will be remembered, were pounced upon during the night of the 31st of January in the Spring-street Station-house, where they were sleeping as vagrant lodgers, and have ever since been held in custody.—ROBINSON at the Mercer-street Station-house and REILLY at Police Headquarters. It was proposed for a long time that these men were detained without any warrant of law whatever; but yesterday it transpired that ROBINSON at least has been detained under a commitment from Judge BEDFORD. It is not known what charge was preferred, but the prisoner resolutely declares that he has never been taken before any Judge or Magistrate.

The prisoners, as may be imagined, have become exceedingly restive under their protracted imprisonment, and to such persons as have had access to them, have expressed an intense desire for liberty, and a willingness to do anything in their power to the means they should take to force the authorities to some decisive action. ROBINSON finally succeeded in putting himself in communication with JOHN D. TOWNSEND, Esq., and upon his request that gentleman readily undertook to act as counsel for the friendless. A personal interview with Mr. TOWNSEND had an interview with his client on Thursday evening, when the prisoner made the following statement:

I have been in prison ten weeks last Sunday; I was not working at all during the last of December, but was staying in Bill Stevens's place, in Thirty-street, with three other men, sometimes, knocking around during the day time getting what odds, different odd jobs; when I left the Station-house on the morning of the 31st of January, I was down on the morning of the 31st of January, the exception of the coat; I had in then a short sacque (this) underneath; the sacque in Spring-street would know what clothes I had on; I had been in the Station-house about two hours when I left the Station-house I returned to the Station-house on the evening of the 31st at 7 did every evening; Reilly went out with me on that evening and returned with me in the evening; we went to the Station-house together; I was there every morning; on New-Year's day, in the afternoon and on the following morning, I cleaned the sidewalk for a lady between Dalyway's place and Fifth-street; I was there in the morning; I was there (yes) when fired in the same way as now except the coat; I was arrested I forget, it at a quarter before one o'clock, in that Station-house; Officer Dowling and Officer Smith arrested me; Officer Dowling came to me; Dowling told me to get up and said that he wanted me to come along; he called me "Jim;" Reilly came immediately after; Dowling said to Reilly, "Have you seen this man?" Reilly said he was with me; he answered, "Yes," and they told him to come along; Reilly and Dowling walked with me; I said, "What for?" and Dowling said, "Don't you know what for, Jim?" and I was generally called by that name; Dowling never gave me a blow or cuff, but did say out on the lock-step the other day, "Jim, I'm sorry I ever put you in here;" I was at Hackett's when I was sleeping in the Station-house; I had it up to the 4th of January; I was available and a part of dark-colored pants; I worked in Kean's, 84 Mott; I was there a month; I was there a month; I was there at Cohoes, in the State; I lived there with a man named Jim, (a negro man,) who worked for Hoagan; I boarded with him; I bought the coat in Albany; I was there about a month; I was in Keyes; I left there for New-Haven; I sold my coat at the 4th of January at Crowley's, at the Five Points, for five cents; the coat I had on was given to me by Mr. Hoagan; I was called Jim; I was called Jim; Mr. Hoagan on the town and bought these; I have on at Lagrange, in Sullivan County; I worked for Brick & Cole there; they are contractors, and bought my shoes at their store; I came to this town in 1866; I landed in Canada; I was there three four or five months; I then went to Buffalo; worked at the Niagara Station; I was there about four or five months; I then went to Portsmouth and stayed there four or five weeks; worked at thread mill for Colonel Sherrer; left there; became the property of Colonel Sherrer; I was there; I was on the lakes about six months for the Western Transportation Line; I then went to Clarksville, Tenn., and worked for the Government six months; Captain Willis was the Quartermaster; I came to Nashville; I came from there to New-York; I arrived in New-York in 1866; I commenced unloading canal boats—worked on Lower East-side; I left the East River, Pier No. 6 or 4; I was there about a month; I was there; I left there; I was there; I was discharged; I left there; I was discharged; I was at the grand jury for stealing a turpentine; at the Sessions; tried at General Sessions Jan. 4, 1869, and got two years; came out Nov. 15, 1867; I had the whole term; I was at Sing Sing; I was there; I had the whole term; I was at Sing Sing; I was there; I was discharged; I was at the Sessions; I was
